H.M.S. DIAMOND LOST

Navy's Grand Show Off Greece

Dramatic Episodes In Withdrawal

THE BRITISH DESTROYERS DIAMOND, OF 1,375 TONS, FORMERLY ON THE CHINA STATION, AND WRYNECK, 900 TONS, WERE ATTACKED BY GERMAN DIVE-BOMBERS AND SUNK DURING THE EVACUATION OF GREECE, STATES AN ADMIRALTY COMMUNIQUE.

On the night of April 25/26, 13,500 men were withdrawn from the Raphis and Nauplia areas. A transport loaded with troops was bombed and set on fire, and Diamond at once went to the rescue.

The destroyer was continually attacked from the air but she picked up 600 men.

Diamond was joined by Wryneck and the latter rescued 100 men, and then Diamond torpedoed the burning and wrecked transport as she was a danger to shipping and a torch for dive-bombers.

Next morning both destroyers, having left Nauplia, were attacked by dive-bombers and sunk. IT IS FEARED CASUALTIES WERE HEAVY. THOUGH 50 WERE PICKED UP BY A THIRD DESTROYER AND AT LEAST ONE BOAT IS BELIEVED TO HAVE REACHED THE GREEK SHORE. — REUTER.

Official Version

The outstanding part played by the Royal Navy, and merchant

Only two destroyers, four transports (three of which empty) were lost in the operation, one of difficulty and magnitude extending over six nights—an achievement which the Admiralty commends to the skill and determination of all concerned.

Warm tribute to the merchant navy's part is paid by the C-in-C, Mediterranean, in the following message: "I wish to convey my appreciation and admiration of their work, to the masters, officers and men of the merchant navy and of all the allied merchant vessels who took part in the movements of the Imperial Forces in Greece and in the recent operation when they were withdrawn."

Fight Back

"Throughout these operations 'under conditions of considerable danger and difficulty, there was no faltering and the determined way in which the ships fought back against aircraft attacks with their defensive armament was magnificent."

Two cruisers, eight destroyers and two auxiliary armed cruisers took part in the evacuation from eight different points, the destroyers Diamond and Wryneck being lost.

During the night April 24/25, about 13,500 men of the Imperial Forces were withdrawn from the Raphis and Nauplia areas. Next night, about 5,300 men were withdrawn from the Megara area. Withdrawals the following night totalled about 16,000 men—over 8,000 from the Kalamata area, over 4,000 from Nauplia, 3,500 from the Raphis and Raphis areas.

Next Morning

It was next morning that Diamond and Wryneck, after leaving Nauplia, were sunk by German dive-bombers.

From the Raphis area, warships evacuated about 4,200 during the night April 27/28. Occupation by the enemy of the Kalamata area prevented the final embarkation which it had been hoped to carry out on the night of April 28/29.

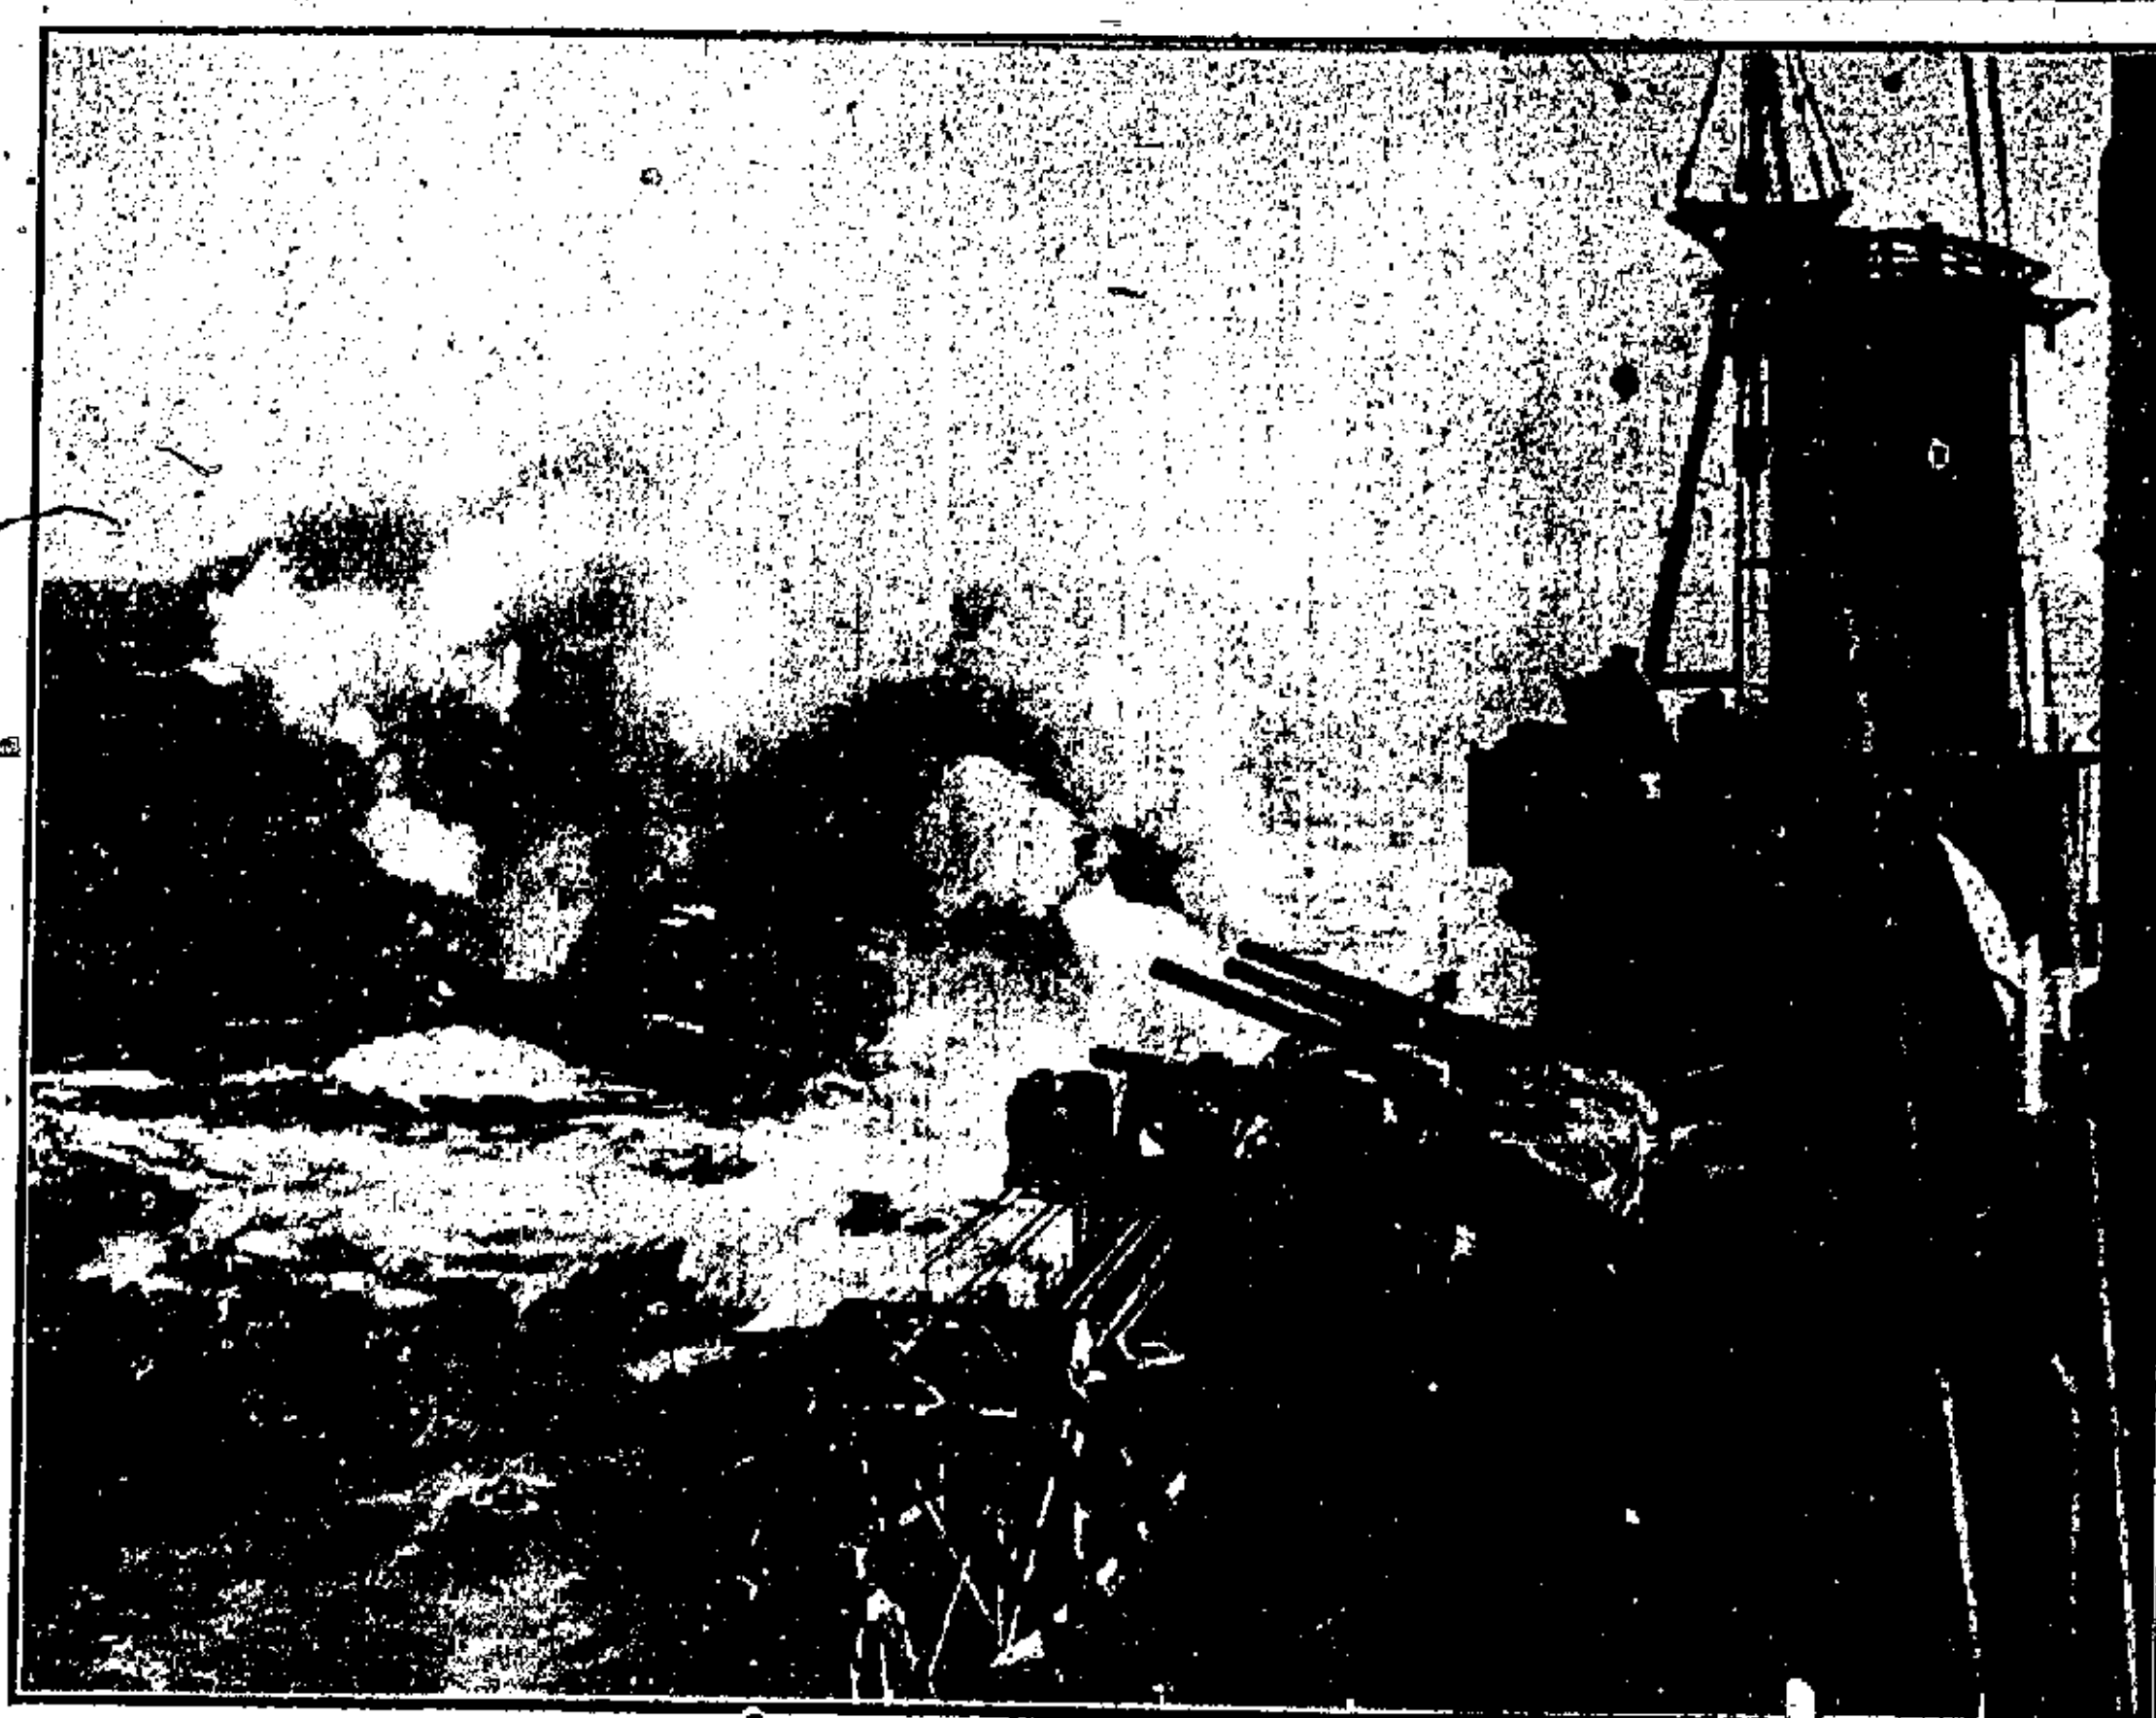

Yet nearly 500 men were, in fact, withdrawn from this area during that night, while 3,750 were taken off the Mithras area and 750 R.A.F. personnel from Kalamata.

Next night, destroyers again operated in the Kalamata area, but only 33 officers and men were found.

Forces Retire

Reuter adds that following consultation with the military authorities it was decided that no further withdrawals could take place. The naval forces were consequently being withdrawn from the vicinity of the Greek coast.

Japanese Cabinet Crisis Looms Large

The Japanese Cabinet, which, according to the Shanghai correspondent of the Independent French Agency, was to hold a special meeting yesterday, is expected in well-informed circles to take important decisions with regard to Japanese action in Indo-China.

The Soviet-Japanese Pact was expected to be violently attacked by the Japanese army and navy representatives who were to attend the Cabinet meeting.

The correspondent adds that the recent decision of Moscow to forbid the transit of war material is likely to give further weight to the arguments of those who oppose closer relations with the Soviets.—Reuter.

HUGE AREA IN MANILA DEVASTATED

A HUGE AREA IN THE SUBURBS OF MANILA, NEAR TO THE PASAY RIVER, WAS DEVASTATED YESTERDAY AFTERNOON BY A FIRE WHICH SWEEPED OUT OF CONTROL IN A STEADY WIND AND RENDERED MORE THAN 6,000 PERSONS HOMELESS.

Flames were leaping hundreds of feet into the air, engulfing Filipino wooden houses at the rate of one a minute for several hours, and raging through timber yards along the river.

The United States 35th Infantry was turned out to assist the Manila fire-fighters to combat the flames, but there were neither enough fire appliances nor firemen to deal with a task of such magnitude.

At one time it seemed certain that a large hospital would become involved and 35 ambulances were prepared to carry away the patients, but when the situation seemed hopeless, the wind changed direction and the holocaust swept diagonally to the north along the Bay. By a strange coincidence, it was exactly four years to the day yesterday when a fire of almost similar dimensions broke out in the same area.

During the afternoon, repeated explosions, for no known cause, were heard from the centre of the great conflagration. A large party of firemen concentrated on

RICE MONOPOLY BY GOVERNMENT

Drastic Action To Control Supply And Profiteering

IT IS THE INTENTION OF THE GOVERNMENT OF HONG KONG, AS FROM JUNE FIRST NEXT, TO ASSUME A MONOPOLY OF ALL RICE IMPORTS AND EXPORTS, AS A WARTIME MEASURE.

Official explanation of this dramatic action, which promises to go to the root of the unscrupulous profiteering of months past, is that it has been compelled by excessively high prices to consumers, arising from rice speculation, the uncertainty of future supplies and the increasing scarcity of shipping facilities.

Announcement was made following an emergency meeting of the Executive Council yesterday morning, when it was disclosed that the proposal to establish a Government rice monopoly had received the approval of the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

The monopoly scheme is linked with an agreement between Hong Kong Government and the Shanghai Municipal Council, under which similar control will be exercised in Shanghai, and a combined effort will be made to bring down the price of rice to the mass consumer in both cities to a reasonable level.

"IT BECAME OBVIOUS," SAYS AN OFFICIAL STATEMENT, "THAT ONLY JOINT CONTROL COULD BE EFFECTIVE IN PREVENTING, AS FAR AS POSSIBLE, FURTHER EXPLOITATION OF THE RICE CONSUMER," FOR WHOSE BENEFIT THE SCHEME HAS BEEN DEVISED.

In taking this drastic step, which, in effect, takes the monopoly from the Nam Pak Hong and transfers it to Government, Hong Kong is following similar war measures in England, where all food supplies are rigidly controlled, and to a lesser extent, Singapore and Ceylon, where rice control has been effective for some time.

THE DECISION WILL UNDOUBTEDLY CAUSE A SHARP SHOCK IN CHINESE BUSINESS CIRCLES, BUT IT NEEDS TO BE POINTED OUT THAT A LAISSEZ FAIRE POLICY HAS PRODUCED A DISASTROUS INCREASE IN THE COST OF LIVING OF THE GREAT MASS OF THE PEOPLE. UNDER THE PRESENT SYSTEM, THERE HAS BEEN DELIBERATE EVASION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS TO CHECK PROFITEERING BY PRICE FIXING, AND THAT SUPPLY DIFFICULTIES ARE GROWING INCREASINGLY ACUTE. OFFERING FURTHER SCOPE OF SPECULATIVE INGENUITY.

Official Statement

The official communique on the position stated: "The rice situation, as affecting both Hong Kong and Shanghai, has been most unsatisfactory for some months past, speculation in the commodity having been rife and profiteering impossible of adequate control."

Generally, prices obtainable for rice in Shanghai or other districts to which re-exports were made from Shanghai, were so unreasonably higher than the controlled prices fixed in Hong Kong that it was only a matter of time before the local domestic price level reached parity with the export market rates, and such operations recurred with frequency.

"It became obvious that only joint control by the Authorities of both Ports could be effective in preventing as far as possible further exploitation of the rice consumer, and assist in the maintenance of steady markets at sources of supply."

Agreement With Shanghai

"To this end the Hong Kong Government and the Shanghai Municipal Council have negotiated an arrangement providing that rice supplies destined for the International Settlement, Shanghai, should be exported exclusively to the Municipal Council there, who will now become the direct importer of such supplies and effect their distribution to retailers."

TURKEY CALLS UP RESERVES

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

Nine classes of reservists called up by the Turkish Government reported for duty throughout Turkey yesterday.

This reinforcement swells by a considerable number the army of over 1,000,000 men which is already under arms.

Meanwhile the evacuation of the north-western areas bordering the Dardanelles has started, with hundreds of families already on the way across the Bosphorus to Asia Minor.

These moves by Turkey are regarded as significant in view of the possibility of new German demands being presented by von Papen, the Nazi Ambassador, who has just returned from Germany.—International News Service.

PACIFIC WAR DANGER

Rumours that the European war might soon extend to the Pacific were played up by the Batavia newspapers yesterday, especially in view of reports from the United States indicating America is determined to carry out aid to Britain to the fullest extent, even at the risk of war, says a Japanese report.

Citing the United States decision on the neutrality patrol system and the German threat to sink all ships in combat zones, the "Batavische Nieuwblad" predicts that fighting between the United States and Germany may take place sooner than generally expected.

The "Java Bode" says that if the United States enters the war Japan will then be forced to fulfill her obligations as a military partner of the Axis powers.—Reuter.

MR. QUO HAS A BUSY DAY

Mr. Quo Tai-chi, new Chinese Minister of Foreign Affairs, had a busy day in Washington yesterday, attending three functions in his honour, including an official luncheon by Mr. Cordell Hull, at the Carlton Hotel.

He there had an opportunity to talk with representative government officials, including Mr. Sumner Welles, Mr. Stanley Hornbeck, Adviser on Political Relations to the State Department, Mr. Maxwell Hamilton, Chief of the Far East Division, Mr. Jesse Jones, Secretary of Commerce, Dr. Laughlin Currie, Mr. Willys Peak, Counselor of the American Embassy in China, Senator Walter George, Senator Warren Austin, Mr. Sol Bloom, Chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, House of Representatives, General Thomas Holcomb, Commandant of the Marine Corps, and Mr. Lippman, well-known journalist.

Chinese officials present included Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese Ambassador, Mr. T. V. Soong, and Mr. Liu Chieh, Counselor of the Chinese Embassy.

More than 100 prominent guests were invited by Mr. Stanley Hornbeck at a cocktail reception in the afternoon to meet Dr. Quo. This was followed by a dinner party given by Dr. Hu Shih at the Chinese Embassy.

The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Jones, Justice and Mrs. Frankfurter, Admiral Harold Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, and Mrs. Stark, and Mr. and Mrs. Sol Bloom.—Central News.

ARRESTED AT SWIMMING POOL

A fine of $50 or one month was imposed on Lan Ngan-lung, 26, odd job cooly, by Mr. H. G. Sheldon, K.C., yesterday morning, for being found on enclosed premises.

Accused was seen inside a dressing room at Victoria Barracks swimming pool, and was arrested by Pte. Davidson, Royal Scots.

Defendant produced a War Department pass, which, however, did not entitle him to be in the swimming pool.

Detective Sergeant V. Morrison prosecuted.

Mr. J. Jay, of the American Express, has reported the theft of a pair of spectacles, valued at $15, from his office on Friday.

hours, the communiqué says early reports suggest that that number of casualties may be large and that a substantial amount of damage was done.

An attack was also made on a town in East Anglia, where a small number of casualties was caused and a considerable number of houses damaged.

Bombs were also dropped at other widely separated points but these did little damage and caused very few casualties.

German Report

Liverpool was the principal object of attack by bomber formations of the Luftwaffe, says the official German news agency.

Other German attacks, it adds, were directed against various towns on the south-east coast.

Sergeant Pilot's Night's Work

It was a sergeant-pilot flying a Havoc who brought down the German bomber over an aerodrome in northern France on Friday night, after he had accomplished a similar feat a few nights previously.

The Nazi bomber blew up at 1,000 feet and the explosion was so great that the Havoc was badly shaken.

When it returned to base it was found that the propeller was dented, the engine cowlings damaged and the wings buckled.

The sergeant-pilot finished off a good night's work by bombing the enemy aerodrome.—Reuter.

HEAVY RAID ON HAMBURG

A "heavy" attack on Hamburg was carried out on Friday night by R.A.F. bombers, states the Air Ministry.

Extensive damage was caused and large fires were seen in industrial areas round the docks.

Other aircraft again attacked Emden and oil stores at Rotterdam.

During daylight on Friday two enemy supply ships of about 5,000 tons were attacked off the Dutch coast. One was set on fire and the other is believed to have sunk outright.

Four aircraft are missing from those operations.

The official German news agency stated that strong forces of the R.A.F. flew into northern Germany on Friday night and dropped incendiary and high explosive bombs in various places.—Reuter.

CHUNGKING PLAN OF EXCHANGE CONTROL

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

A SCHEME, ADVOCATED by Mr. Chie Chisang, well-known Chinese economist, whereby financial transactions involving foreign exchange will be completely controlled by Government, may shortly be adopted, it was learned from authoritative sources in Chungking last night.

It was further learned that the Chungking Government do not intend to use the fresh British and American loans to the Stabilisation Fund to "feed" the Shanghai market, which is known to be serving the Japanese in their attempts to obtain the foreign currency held by the Chinese Government.

Under the new scheme, "Fapeli" (legal tender) would not be negotiable for foreign exchange furnished by Chinese Government banks without permission from Government.

Both Chinese and foreigners alike would be required to apply for permission to secure foreign exchange by means of "Fapeli" and the reason for applying for such exchange must be given to the satisfaction of the financial authorities before a permit will be issued.

Permits will not be transferable in order to prevent these passing into Japanese control.

Exchange rates will be fixed day by day by the Chinese Government and will be higher than the prevailing rates in Hong Kong and Shanghai.

The scheme is almost identical to the Chinese Exchange Control Ordinance of March 12, 1938, the difference being that the exchange rate will be fixed by Government day by day, instead of attempting to maintain the official fixed rate of 1:20.

Financial circles in Chungking highly approve the scheme.—Our Own Correspondent.

81 JAPANESE PLANES BOMB CHUNGKING

The Sino-British Boxer Fund Board building was demolished and the press hostel badly damaged at noon yesterday when 81 Japanese aircraft subjected Chungking to the first bombing this year.

The raiders rained down bombs on the downtown district and the western suburbs.—Reuter.

INSPIRING WORK BY INDIAN TROOPS

BY THE INSPIRING victories they have won in East Africa, Indian troops have assisted superbly in keeping the enemy distant from the shores of India, said Lieutenant-General Heath, in a broadcast from Simla.

Lieut-General Heath commanded the Fifth Division of the Indian troops in the campaign in Eritrea, and he has just arrived in India.

He declared that the troops under him had fought magnificently. Never on any single occasion had they failed in the tasks set them, though sometimes those tasks were stupendous.

Throughout the operations, he said, the state of sickness was small, especially among the Indian ranks.

Perfect Cooperation

The understanding and the co-operation between British and Indian troops was everywhere perfect. He gave as an instance the successful attack upon Fort Dolgorodoc at Keren, where every section, including the Maharattas, the Pathans and the Yorkshire Regiment played their respective parts with conspicuous bravery, and their success was exploited immediately by the Punjab and the Frontier Force Rifles.

Very determined counter-attacks by Italian infantry were then smashed by the Indian troops, despite the fact that their opponents were the flower of the Eritrean Army, who resisted for ten days.

More Than A Match

All this time, the men were cheerful and undaunted despite the tremendous local difficulties of the evacuation of their wounded.

General Heath concluded by stating that the Army in India feel as he himself did, that they are more than a match for the Germans.—Reuter.

DR. VAN KLEFFENS SYDNEY-BOUND

Dr. van Kleffens, Foreign Minister, and Charles Welter, Colonial Minister in the Netherlands Government in London, who went to Sourabaya on May 1, are expected to arrive in Sydney on May 12, accompanied by J. H. Rittman, the Government spokesman, says a Japanese report from Batavia quoted by Reuter.

NEW WAR DRIVE IN AUSTRALIA

Strong in the determination to make the Australian Imperial Forces a highly equipped striking force, greater industrial efforts are to be made.

So that the maximum use is made of skilled labour, tighter control of industry is envisaged similar to the British system.

This will follow a form of revision of manpower, which is to be carried out throughout the Commonwealth.

To aid the flow of labour into armament manufacture, a check on reserved occupations is also expected.

The Australian Government is also vigorously pushing the recruiting drive. They are determined adequately to reinforce the Australian Imperial forces and also ensure a strong home defence.—Reuter.

JAPANESE TROOPS RE-EMBARK

Japanese army and naval units which landed at Haimen and Wenchow, on the coast of Chekiang province, after completion of the operations of blocking the Chungking supply route and crushing Chinese resistance, yesterday embarked for operations in another sector, says a Japanese communique issued in Shanghai.

MILLION DOLLARS RANSOM PAID

Nearly four months after his abduction, Pan Tse-chuen, comprador of Jardine's, has been released and is now en route to Hong Kong, stated the "Shanghai Evening Post and Mercury" yesterday.

The paper adds it is believed a large sum, probably $1,000,000, was paid as ransom to the kidnapers.—Reuter.

NAVY LENDS A HAND

The defenders of Tobruk have brought to a standstill numerically superior Italo-German forces after destroying 11 tanks and inflicting heavy casualties in a counter-attack.

British warships are rendering effective help to the gallant garrison, pounding the coast to prevent reinforcements reaching the Axis forces.

The Italo-German drive in the Soltum area has been halted 60 miles inside Egypt, and formidable Axis attacks towards Sidi Barrani have been thrown back.—International News Service.

CHOLERA INCIDENCE RISES

A slight increase in cholera was registered on Friday when five cases from Victoria, one from Shaikwan and one from the New Territories, were notified to the Health Authorities, bringing the total during the outbreak to 709.

In addition to the seven cholera cases, there were 21 of tuberculosis, five of enteric fever, four each of measles and diphtheria and one of dysentery.

FINISHING OFF A.R.P. TUNNELS

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

Work on Air Raid Tunnels is still continuing, day and night, and it is estimated that some five or six miles of tunnel have been bored to date.

Excavation on a number of the tunnels has been completed and these are now under the process of being "lined" and "walled" with reinforced-concrete slabs and beams, to prevent caving in.

Latrines are to be constructed inside and outside the tunnels which are to be lighted with hurricane lamps and equipped with medical supplies and first-aid materials.

DAMAGE TO ST. PAUL'S

News of the extent of the damage suffered by St. Paul's Cathedral during the recent raid has been allayed by a reassuring statement issued by the Dean and Chapter.

Though the damage inflicted on the North Transept is serious and expert advisers have not yet fully examined the results in this part of the structure, it is hoped that the stability of the main building has not been affected.

The comprehensive scheme of preservation carried out in the years 1913 to 1930 has apparently enabled the fabric, so far, to stand up well to the violent shocks it has suffered.—British Wireless.

Counter-Attacks

Regarding the operations in Libya it is learned in London that on May 1 the enemy made a further determined attack on the defences of Tobruk from the direction of Akroma supported by a considerable number of tanks.

We counter-attacked and much fighting has been going on inside the western perimeter defences during which the enemy suffered many casualties.

On May 2 our artillery fire stopped a further attack by enemy tanks and infantry on our new lines of defence.—British Wireless.

German Claim

German troops are claimed to have penetrated deep into the Tobruk defences, "stubbornly defended by the British," in yesterday's German High Command communique.

The communique adds that "a large number of dug-outs were captured and several hundred prisoners taken." The Germans also claim to have sunk over a million tons of British merchant shipping in April, of which 400,000 tons were in Greek waters, besides damaging 250 other ships.

Many Casualties

Thursday's Axis attack on Tobruk, which cost the enemy 11 tanks and heavy casualties, was followed by a further assault on Friday.

The enemy infantry were held up by our artillery fire and new lines of defence, with many casualties.

It is stated in Cairo that it is probably the defence of Tobruk which is holding up the enemy advance on the Egyptian border.

Nairobi Communique

A communique issued in Nairobi states that the Imperial forces in Abyssinia have reached a point 50 miles north of Dessie.

In Dessie itself a further 600 European troops and 200 colonial troops have been taken. Among war material seized were 400 mechanical transport vehicles.—Reuter.

The communique says Imperial

STREET GUARD RECRUITS

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

Brisk recruiting of Street Guards is now taking place and the total registered to date is 1,040 members, it was learned last night.

Nine hundred of these are on the register of the Commissioner of Police, while preliminary organisation of the remainder is awaiting completion before their names are forwarded.

There are, however, only 500 of the registered Street Guards actually on the duty roster, patrolling 41 streets on the island and the Mainland. The rest have not been assigned to duty owing to lack of uniforms and other equipment.

It was learned that 1,200 Street Guards will be required to cover the 74 roads and streets which it is proposed to patrol in six-hour shifts in the event of an emergency.

PETITION FOR JACK RILEY

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")
A joint petition to the Governor of Oklahoma has been passed round for signature in Shanghai by friends of Edward "Jack" Riley, in an attempt to win a pardon or parole for the "slot machine king," now serving an 18-month term on McNeil Island, San Francisco.

The petition says Riley "helped thousands of poor people, paid his debts and did not smoke or drink," and used whatever time he could spare from work to play baseball. McWhorter, Cecil Sossieher, Riley's Russian landlady, who hid him in her boarding house after his escape, has been given a suspended sentence of three months. — International News Service.

LABOUR DISPUTE SETTLED

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")
A labour dispute over wages in Chinese iron and steel foundries is about to be settled, it was reliably learned yesterday.

The dispute is over two weeks old but only in one foundry has work been disrupted—for five days—moulders in all the other factories having continued working while the matter was being discussed between the moulders' and employers' representatives. The assistance of the Labour Officer, Mr. B. C. K. Hartman, was requested, and this Government official has drafted an agreement which (if the moulders do not go back on their word) will be signed during the next few days.

"Resistance The Only Protection"

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")
OPINION IS GAINING GROUND IN THE UNITED STATES THAT AMERICAN PARTICIPATION IN THE EUROPEAN WAR IS INEVITABLE.

In Washington, high Government officials appear to be thinking more and more of the possibility of the United States entering the war as the only means of saving Great Britain.

Previously all talks were confined to all-out short of war, but this trend of thought has definitely passed.

Administration leaders are inclining more and more to the opinion that effective aid must include United States participation in the war and all indications tend to show that the country is being prepared for this new view.

It is three weeks since the all-out short of war policy has been mentioned by a responsible U.S. official and that was when the Vice-President, Mr. Henry Wallace, delivered his speech on April 8.

The situation is now viewed in a different light. The Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull, in a statement said significantly: "The defence of this hemisphere calls for resistance where resistance is known to be the only protection."

ARSENAL COOLIE ARRESTED

Chen Chiu, 38, arsenal coolie, was charged before Mr. H. G. Sheldon, K.C., yesterday, with the theft of a bar of tin and a quantity of solder, valued at $80, from Wellington Barracks.

Three other arsenal coolies, Ma Ping-pui, 24, Au Kin, 27, and Ho Kwan, 20, were charged with receiving stolen property.

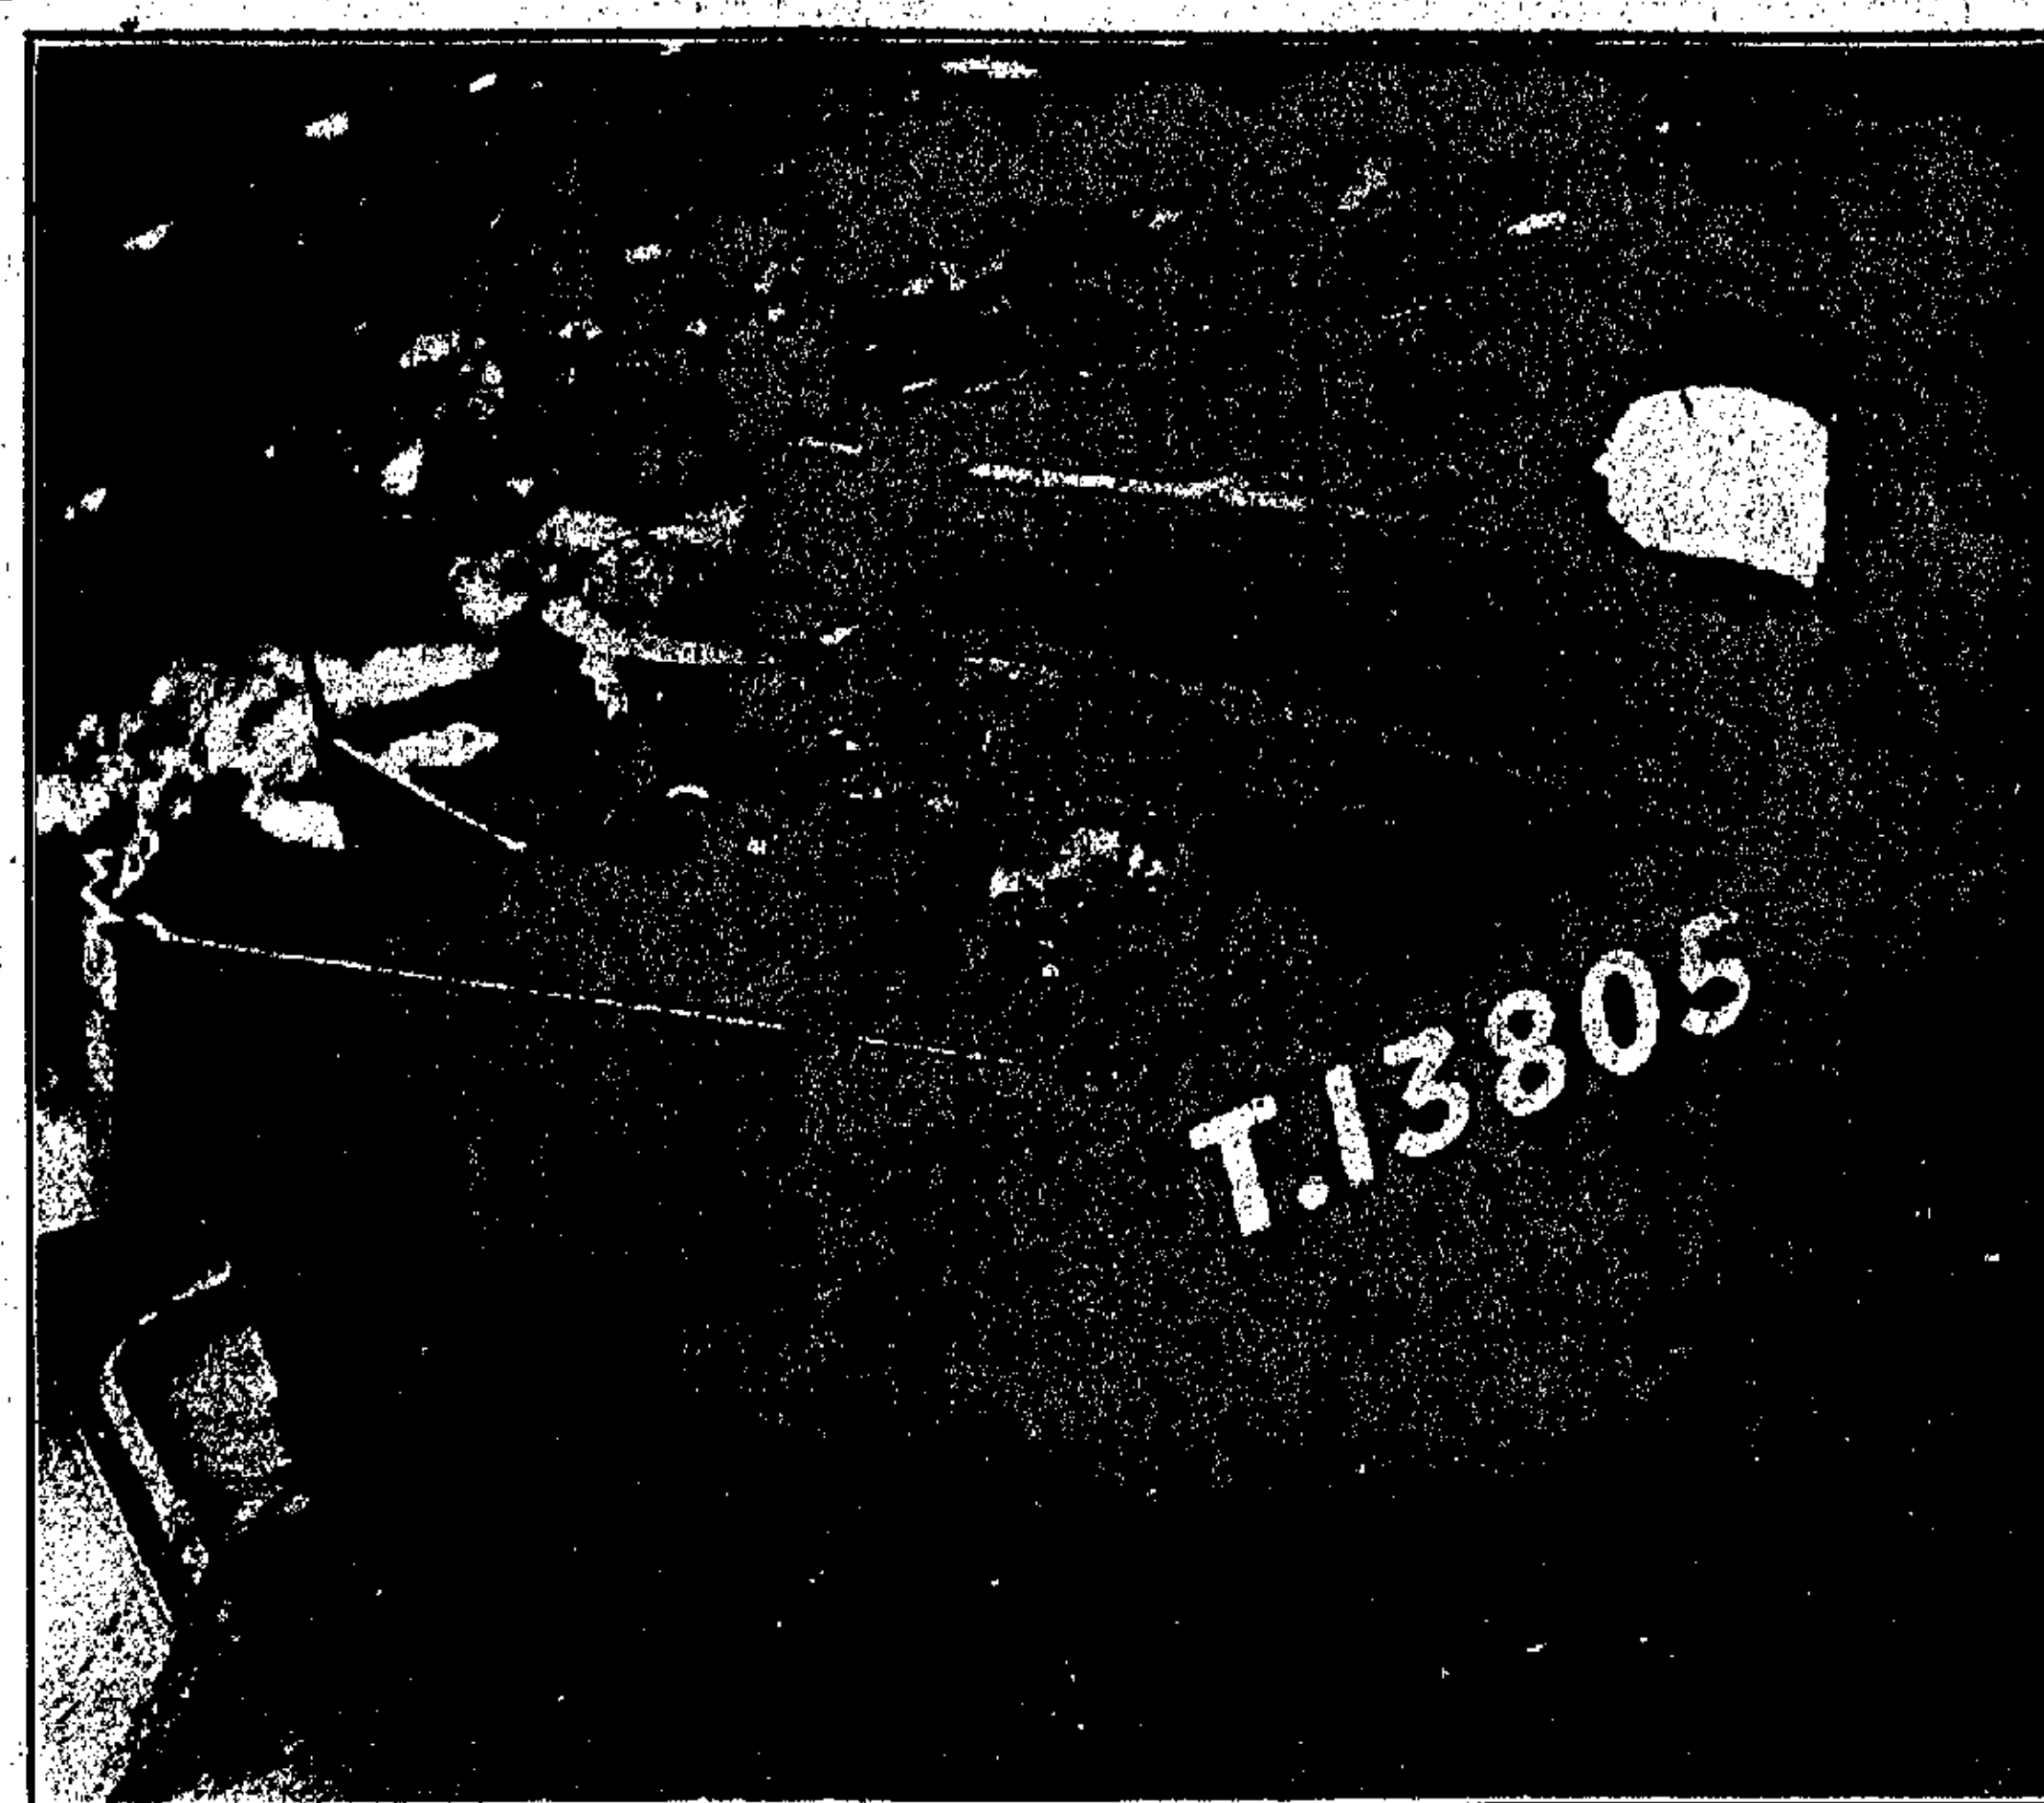

Mr. C. Y. Kwan is appearing for first accused, Chan, while Mr. J. M. D'Amado, Remedios is for second accused.

Hearing was fixed for May 15, at 2.30 p.m.

Detective Sergeant V. Morrison is in charge of the case.

ESCORT BUREAUX RUMOUR

Reports in the Chinese press that the three Chinese Lady Inspectors attached to the Labour Office are to investigate conditions under which girl-escorts are employed in the Colony, were officially stated to be untrue yesterday. CHINA PLANNING TO USE ANCIENT CARAVAN ROUTES

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

ANCIENT CARAVAN routes which formerly were the only means of communication between China and the outside world—particularly India—may soon be re-opened for the purpose of creating additional means for obtaining essential supplies from abroad, it was learned in Chungking yesterday.

ZEILA CANARD

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

The statement issued in Vichy a week ago to the effect that Free French and Imperial forces are threatening French Somaliland from Zeila has been officially denied in London.

A London announcement states that there are no troops, either Free French or British, at the seaport of Zeila. — International News Service.

Mr. T. Lock, of No. 11, Dragon Terrace, has reported the theft of a jacket from his car, which was parked outside the Colonial Secretary's Office, P.W.D. Building, on Friday.

Several Chinese experts and technicians are now on their way to China's western borders and India to carry out the necessary investigations on behalf of the Chinese Government.

On the eve of their departure from Chungking, one of the experts, in an exclusive interview, related that the caravan routes were in existence as early as the Han Dynasty (206 B.C. to 219 A.D.) when Buddhism found its way into China over these routes.

It is on record that during the Tang Dynasty (618-905 A.D.) the Emperor sent three monks by one of the caravan routes to India for further studies in Buddhism.

According to the Chungking Government's order, no matter what difficulties are encountered, these ancient caravan routes must be re-opened. — Our Own Correspondent.

ALLEGED ROBBERY

COMMITTAL PROCEEDINGS AGAINST THREE CHINESE CHARGED WITH ROBBERY, WERE CONCLUDED BEFORE MR. H. C. MACNAMARA AT KOWLOON YESTERDAY. THEY WERE COMMITTED FOR TRIAL AT THE NEXT CRIMINAL SESSIONS.

Accused, Tsang Ki, 20, Mak Fong-shing, 18, and Ho Fuk, 26, are alleged to have robbed Chan Tin-yu of a purse, containing $4, a bunch of keys and a whistle, on the staircase of No. 8, Battery Street at 7.45 p.m. on April 4.

According to the prosecution, conducted by Det.-Sgt. N. B. Fraser, the three accused robbed Chan while he was walking up the staircase to his home.

After chasing them, he finally gave up and made no report to the police.

The police, however, arrested accused on April 21 and the following morning, complainant picked out all three at an identification parade at Yau-mati Police Station.

NO SUCCESSOR YET ANNOUNCED

Mr. R. A. D. Forrest, Immigration Officer, who has been invalided out of Government Service, is leaving soon.

His successor has not yet been appointed. No name, it was officially learned, has yet come up for discussion.

It is considered likely that Mr. J. H. B. Lee, Deputy-Immigration Officer, will be appointed to the higher post, with Mr. E. H. H. Swarth as his Deputy.

JUNK PEOPLE FINED

TWELVE BOAT PEOPLE WERE EACH FINED $15 BY MR. D. J. N. ANDERSON AT KOWLOON YESTERDAY FOR APPROACHING A SHIP WHICH WAS FLYING THE IMMIGRATION FLAG.

The Magistrate was informed that the Immigration Department had made numerous complaints against boat people getting on board ships before the Immigration Officers.

The prosecuting police officer, however, agreed that the boat people might not know the purposes of different types of flags, especially the "H. Over N.N." flag, which had been effective about a month or so.

LOST! 41 Lbs. of FAT

In 3 Weeks

Popular Detroit Girl Overcome With Joy—Reduced Hip Six Inches, Bust Six Inches—Wears Smaller Size Dresses—Feels Fine—Wins Many New Friends, and Goes Everywhere Now.

If you are handicapped with excessive weight, indigestion, dizziness and other tortures that plague fat folks—wouldn't it make you happy beyond description to have an experience like this pretty Detroit girl? Don't say it can't be done, for since reports are constantly pouring into the headquarters of Bonkora, the new Battle Creek treatment, the safe and natural way to take off excess pounds by cleansing wastes from the intestines and removing retained moisture from fatty tissues. Read the almost miraculous story of Miss Rose Sparrow, 551 Arcadia Street, Detroit, Michigan, who states: "I weighed 157 pounds—today under 156. In three short weeks I lost 41 pounds. Reduced six inches in the bust and six inches in the hips. I can wear a 12 size dress now. Since losing in weight my digestion and spirits have improved and my friends are many more friends than I had a month ago. I thank you for the Bonkora treatment and recommend it to my girl friends who are also using it. It sure is a lot of fun taking Bonkora for reducing."

JUNK PIRACY

A junk piracy in British waters a.m. on Thursday off Fuk Kim on Thursday was reported to the police yesterday by the master of the victimised junk on his arrival in the Harbour. The robbers transferred the cargo, $8,000 worth of timber, and stole $3,795 in Chinese currency. The junk was stopped at 5 p.m.

GUNNER AND GIRL HURT IN MOTOR ACCIDENT

Corporal G. J. Fuller, of the 12th Heavy Battery, R.A., and a lady companion, riding pillion, were both treated at the Kowloon Hospital last night, when a motorcycle Fuller was riding collided with a taxi on turning into Jordan Road. Both were thrown heavily.

Only One Survivor Of Murder

A CARGO JUNK loaded with 500 bags of salt, left Hong Kong for Chungshan on Friday, with 13 crew and passengers on board.

Seven hours after its departure, the junk was captured, set on fire and the crew and passengers thrown into the sea.

Only one man reached Hong Kong to tell the tale.

The junk left Hong Kong at 6 p.m. on Friday and at 1 a.m. yesterday, about a mile west of Lin Tin Island, it was stopped by an armed Japanese trawler, sailors from which ordered the crew to transfer the cargo of salt to the trawler. AFTER THIS HAD BEEN DONE, THE CREW AND PASSENGERS WERE ORDERED ABOARD THE TRAWLER. THE JAPANESE THEN SET FIRE TO THE JUNK AND AFTERWARDS MADE THE CREW AND PASSENGERS OF THE JUNK "WALK THE PLANK" ONE BY ONE.

The sole survivor, 35-year-old Pang Kan-chen, folk of the Hop Fat Company, of Hong Kong, managed to catch hold of an oar of the junk and after drifting for almost 10 hours, was sighted and picked up by a vessel on its way from Macao to Hong Kong, arriving in the Colony at noon yesterday.

'ROOFTOP MONKEYS'

Nick-named "Roof-top monkeys" several boys were arrested by the Police on Friday night in Wanichai.

The arrests followed several burglaries in the neighbourhood, which, it was learned, were carried out with the aid of a length of rope, boys being lowered from roof-tops to an open window and pulled up after they had collected valuables and money from the house.

COUNCIL MEMBERS APPEAL FOR NIGHTSOIL WORKERS

COMMENTING ON an appeal issued yesterday by the four Chinese Unofficial Members of the Executive and Legislative Councils and the Chairman of the Tung Wah Hospital, for donations to relieve the distress of nightsoil coolies out of work, a Government spokesman stated that for cases of genuine distress, there was room at the Government camps.

It was pointed out to the group which demonstrated on Thursday at the S.C.A. and on Friday at the Urban Council that nightsoil coolies had been misled by their advisers in refusing to seek employment within the Government scheme.

A certain amount of distress, it is admitted, has been caused where nightsoil disposal was carried out by family groups, and not under the direction of contractors. It is pointed out that such family "businesses" for bringing buckets from upper floors, a system suggestive of the days in Britain when small boys were sent up chimneys by sweeps, a system suppressed in 1832. Government, it is stressed, cannot admit the employment of child labour into the new system.

To deal with such family cases, the "Sunday Herald" was informed, Government has agreed to advance a certain sum to meet immediate needs, on the understanding that the adults would register for employment.

Letter Of Appeal

The letter of appeal issued yesterday reads: "May we trespass upon your columns to appeal to the charitable minded of Hong Kong to give donations to form a relief fund for the nightsoil coolies who are unemployed as the result of Government taking over the nightsoil removal, pending their re-absorption by the Urban Council or other employment. "We should like to make it clear that donations are invited on the following terms:— "That the Body responsible for the relief will have complete discretion as to what relief should be given, and in particular the Relief Body shall have full discretion in refusing aid where the Relief Body is satisfied that the applicant for relief is not making any bona fide efforts to obtain employment, e.g. by registering with the Urban Council for employment, as soon as a vacancy occurs. "Whilst relief will be given to the extent of the financial resources available on the lines stated above, should there be any ultimate balance remaining, we are to have full discretion, in consultation with the Hon. the Secretary for Chinese Affairs, to donate such balance to charities, instead of returning the same to the donors.

SUICIDE NOTE FOUND

"I will tie myself to a large rock and throw myself into the Harbour."

This was one of the sentences in a letter which a waterfront coolie came across early yesterday morning near the Star Ferry on Kowloon side.

The letter was lying beside a rattan basket, a blanket, and a pair of shoes, and was addressed to the author's mother in Yau-mai.

Investigations later revealed that the supposed author and the owner of the basket, blanket and shoes, was a Chinese employed in the Kowloon Godowns.

LONDON REBUILT

The "News Chronicle" invited Frank Lloyd Wright, one of the world's greatest architects, to write this article.

Wright is 70. He is of Welsh extraction. His best-known building is the Imperial Hotel, Tokyo. It was his first use of the cantilever principle. The 1923 earthquake destroyed almost every modern building in Tokyo, but his stood undisturbed.

THE greatest creature of habit on earth is London. The sums and ugliness that would have taken centuries to overcome have been blasted out of the way in a few days.

And while sentiment is entitled to its tears, the art and science of human habitation may get a break. If English-speaking culture, by way of grit and the will of Englishmen, takes the break goes ahead and builds in line with this age of mechanical power the Empire may die, but English domination will survive to triumph.

Power so capable to destroy is just as capable to create, as we shall soon see. And we shall soon see whether England is humanitarian or only English, and see whether Germany is humanitarian or only Germanic.

If England is humanitarian London will decentralise now. The bomb overhead points to that as a necessity. London reintegrated should be twenty-five times the area of old London. The new space-scale of our mechanical age is just about that—twenty-five feet now to one foot then.

Human congestion is murder, murder if not of the carcass then murder of the most desirable human sensibilities. There is room and a crying need for the Greater London and the plan for it should be laid down keeping in mind that Tradition, with a capital T, is infinitely greater than the manifold traditions to which it gives rise. Minor traditions must die in order that great tradition may live.

Great building always begins at the beginning, so the necessary items are:

- 1.—No very rich nor very poor to build for—no gold.
- 2.—No idle land except for common landscape—no real estate speculators.
- 3.—No holding against society of the ideas by way of which society lives—no patents.

In short, no speculation in money, land or idea; not one of them must be any longer regarded as a speculative commodity but must be used as the actual necessities of human life, like air and water. This is the true basis for what we could honestly call Democracy. It is a necessary basis upon which to build a city of the mechanical age that will take the place of the feudal monster now being destroyed.

The liberation of the human individuality is not so terrible a leveler of human fortunes as it may seem to be.

It is the only just basis for true

By Frank Lloyd Wright

capitalism, the life of human initiative. Base capital broad upon the ground, not with apex on the ground, base in the air. Except for the disabled, unemployment of any kind would be unthinkable in a State so founded. England could be that State, and would be for ever impregnable.

The physical body of the democratic city of to-day would have no one centre but would have many centres all well correlated, the height of the buildings increasing as the perimeter of activity was approached.

Were Old London to fairly accommodate partial motorisation it already had B.B. (Before the Bombs), there could be no building at all in London. And London motorisation had just begun.

London should be a motor-car, aeroplane London, the spacing all laid out upon a new scale of human movement set by car and plane.

But the sentimentality of our elders blocks the path of true progress and continually begs for compromise. Make none. Make none whatever, because all the vision we have is not enough to prevent such sentimentality from catching up and holding us back again.

Keep this static out, and keep the traffic centres all wide open. Historic London could be featured in a great central London park system. Conduct power from the mines. Do not cramp industrial areas around piles of raw material or fuel with the usual deadly dull collateral "housing" by Government. Abolish the back and forth haul of people, fuel and supplies. Do not be afraid now to build factories and farms as the fit associates for country homes; id schools, churches, theatres and parks.

It is easy to do this with fluid power and integral architecture and to secure noble results. The necessity for the old pigeonholing and severe segregations of the horse and buggy past being back there now with the manure pile and the horse and buggy mind. A new kind of beauty has come back to life, a beauty that is integrity. We can plan for an integral life.

Integral building is a necessity to democratic culture. It is a mere phrase. We are building it a little here and there, in spite of the code of interference and waste. It is international now, but it spoke English first and can save England from bombs for ever, because the pressures that made war inevitable cannot exist in a Democracy so planned. The dictators would be out of luck.

There should be no traffic problem. That has been solved in Broadacre City. Make broad streets concave instead of convex, with underpasses for foot passengers. Provide ton-turn-left intersections for traffic, and over and underpasses for the cross-roads. No traffic lights because roads themselves would be low-lighted ribbons. For all this the likelihood of accidents is reduced to about one-tenth of one per cent. And away with poles and wires for ever.

Along with honestly free speech goes honestly free life for the individual, his own ground, his own house, all his own way, yet in no man's way. No, not Utopia, just a way of building from a good modern plan for democratic people. That's all.

What luxury and pagan beauty the Greeks knew, or medieval Christianity knew, can be made to seem and be merely an exterior thing, like some stage setting. There need be no difference in quality of thought or structure between the house of a man with more and the house of a man with less; only difference in extent.

All may harmonise. Individuality could inform and enliven all private homes to-morrow without mutual detriment if architecture could live again, even if it must live again because of bombs in irresponsible hands. Maybe it could yet only live because of bombs. Who knows?

The home is the real citadel of the human race in any democracy, and where and while the private home has integrity I bespeak for it. There will be no war.

Railway arteries should be elevated with continuous storage space beneath the tracks; lorry traffic should be set low on each side so that lorries may be free to take on or take off anywhere. All traffic should be fluid and undated.

Yes: it can be done. Such grandeur as survives the bomb should expend itself by extensions parallel with the ground—going up into the air only as activity things out. Old building cydes should be thrown away. New ones, simplified and broadened in keeping with the opportunities of the new age, should be written.

DON'T TREAT YOUR CHILD'S SYSTEM AS YOU DO YOUR OWN

Your child may be a little man to you—act so much like "Dad" that you may forget that his system is delicate after all. It cannot stand even in small doses the same strong laxatives that adults may take.

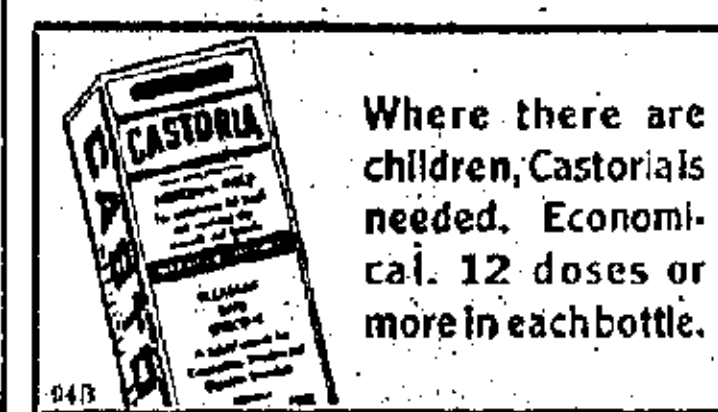

Castoria is made especially and only for children

So the next time his tongue is coated, a cold is on the way, or he has a stomach upset, give him Castoria, the laxative made especially and only for children. He will take it willingly for children love its pleasant taste. But above all else Castoria is safe for delicately balanced young systems—contains no harsh, irritating "adult" drugs.

Castoria is so mild and gentle in action it can be taken from babyhood to 11 years. Get acquainted with Castoria—the safe laxative made especially and only for children. Keep a bottle on hand always.

Where there are children, Castoria is needed. Economical. 12 doses or more in each bottle.

Incidentally..

MR. Justice P. E. F. Cressall, the new Puisne Judge, comes to the judicial bench in Hong Kong with a rousing freshness of outlook. It has taken him but a day or two to find the flaws in his court's practice in procedure, and his little address to members of the Profession on Friday had a very welcome ring about it. Mr. Justice Cressall did not suggest any intention to force things, but he made his points impressively, and in the sort of way that evokes the happiest response. It is not suggested that there is or has been anything really wrong. It is just that some bad habits have grown up with the years. A little shake-up will most certainly be beneficial all round.

Back With The Babies

IT is good news to hear that Miss Mildred Didden is thoroughly well again and back with her babies at Fanning. That, indubitably, sounds a somewhat ambiguous way of putting it, particularly as Miss Didden has been carrying on her magnificent work at the founding home for a very considerable period, at the same time skillfully evading the glare of publicity. She tells us there are now 77 babies in the home, from three days to four years old!

NOW that she is back Miss Didden intimates that she would be delighted to welcome at the Babies' Home those friends who in recent months have made donations to the Home anonymously through the "Sunday Herald." Unfortunately, we are unable to give precise directions, as to the best method of reaching it. The Home is one of those places off the Fanning road which you can only find for yourself. It is well worth the effort, however, for only then can it be fully appreciated what a grand job, and a very important job, Miss Didden is doing.

Mrs. T. E. Pearce, presenting the prizes at the conclusion of the Colony's badminton championships at the K.C.C. on Thursday, K. W. Choy, the singles champion, is receiving his trophy. Also in the picture are the Hon. Mr. T. E. Pearce, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Raymond, Mr. M. T. Alan (Hon. Secretary of the H.K.B.A.), Mr. S. A. Gray (President), Mrs. E. C. Fincher and Mr. V. C. Labrum.

next four or five months is safely negotiated. Then a little diplomatic suavity, tenue and a manner of conciliation in the right quarter, and just possibly, we may have royal Christmas celebrations hereabouts.

DON'T think we are promising anything. It is just a guess, which is probably as good as anybody else's.

ON letters to the Editor, more generally, we are often amazed at the arrogance of some of the writers, who see nothing marvelous in the fact that they are granted space in an era of a shortage of paper for expression of their petty little fads and fancies.

Mrs. Dot

HONG KONG'S amateur dramatic season closed last night in a blaze of glory, and it was the Y.M.C.A. Dramatic Club who supplied the sparkling finish.

THERE are many kinds of tripe. Cooked by Somerset Maugham and served up by Charles Thom, "Mrs. Dot" proved to be of the pleasantest possible variety. The story, it is true, is a trifle, but that doesn't matter, because it was designed to give the actors limitless scope for their talents. It is not too much to say that full. Indeed, it is positively embarrassing to have so many belated quets to hand out. The largest must undoubtedly go to Freddie Clemo, whose handling of his love-scene with Peggy Sharpe in the second act was a superb piece of "silly-ass" acting.

WE can say without hesitation that this is the finest of its kind we've seen for a very long time. In the first act, Freddie seemed rather affected by stage-fright, but in the second he fully compensated for his slow start. (We saw his father sitting in front of us. He was beaming with pride. He simply glowed when, in the third act, his son delivered the line "I chose my parents very carefully.") Peggy Sharpe also acquitted herself well in this scene, but it was her partner who stole the limelight.

WE feel sure Somerset Maugham could not have had in mind anyone as entrancing as Winifred Dalziel when he wrote in the part of Blenkinsop, for it doubt as to who were members

ON the other hand, we think he failed to make the most of David Ingley's talents. We imagine he has more real dramatic instinct and experience than any other member of the cast, he has a personable appearance and a clear, well-pitched voice. Yet somehow or other, he didn't quite convince.

NORA Witchell, as the scheming mother who loved romance provided its finances were in good shape, deserves special mention. And William Kirby does those butler parts so well that he's in danger of being kept to them for life. All too short was William Colledge's delightful piece of character-acting as the middle-aged solicitor. One of these days we shall see him in a really big role. Lewin Benn's amusing half-minute appearance as the hen-pecked violet is worth recording, too. We know that Rita Cole can act, but on this occasion she wasn't given a chance.

FINALLY, a word must be said about the scenery. We have come to expect a high standard in Hong Kong, and generally we get it. But in "Mrs. Dot" the measure was gratifyingly generous. There were two scenes and both of them were very good, but it was the second that evoked our admiration. The simple, effective design and the restrained colour scheme, were an artistic achievement. We offer our congratulations to Mr. T. E. Wood.

Farewell To Dean Wilson

ON Wednesday evening, the Northumberland and Durham Society are giving a cocktail party to speed the departure of Dean J. L. Wilson. His going will leave in Hong Kong a gap that will not easily be filled. As far as the Georgies are concerned, the loss will be irreparable, for they are apt to forget his many other claims on our esteem, and to remember only that he is Hong Kong's best Tynesider.

ATTENDING one of their shows, one might sometimes be in the part of Blenkinsop, for it doubt as to who were members

Schoolboy Howlers

ONE of the best-known subjects for school essay-writing is "God Made Country, Man Made the Town." With Chinese boys, the topic is a great favourite, for they are all firm believers in the virtues of rural life.

AT an examination of St. Stephen's Boys School, the initial letter of the first word was indistinct, and one boy read it as "God" instead of "God." This did not deter him, and with great skill he proceeded to demonstrate how fish contributed to the amenities of country life. The Chinese, he said, were very fond of cod. It was caught at the coast, where it was dried and imported into the remotest corners of the interior. There it was a valuable factor in relieving the monotony of the rice diet. Then there is cod liver oil, which, containing "Vitamin B," is valuable in combating beri-beri and pellagra. It was a first-class essay and in spite of his error, he earned high marks.

THIS was one of the stories told to us recently by the Rev. E. W. L. Martin, headmaster of St. Stephen's. We hope he won't mind our repeating it. It illustrates, we think, that nothing is too difficult for the youth of New China.

ANOTHER popular essay is "My Favourite Pastime." One student began, "My favourite pastime is 1939." It was yet another pupil at St. Stephen's who wrote, "Napoleon III put up some fine public houses."

Distinguished Visitor

SIR Archibald Cochrane, Governor of Burma since 1936, is arriving in the Colony tomorrow with Lady Cochrane, and they will, during their stay, be the guests of H.E. the Governor. Sir Archibald achieved fame in the last war, as one of the intrepid submarine commanders who made such havoc with Turkish shipping in the Sea of Marmara, involving negotiations for the passage of the Dardanelles. Eventually, he was captured, but his subsequent escape earned him a bar to the D.S.O. which had already been awarded.

HE retired from the Navy in 1922 and went into politics, sitting as M.P. for East Fife from 1924 to 1929 and for Dumbartonshire from 1929 until his appointment as Governor of Burma. Sir Archibald is only 56 years of age, and the Home Government is not likely to permit his talents to go to waste in this time of crisis. He is the second son of the first Baron Cochrane of Cults, Lady Cochrane is the daughter of the first Baron Cornwallis.

Experiment

AN interesting experiment is being carried out by the Shumchun Rural Welfare Centre in the New Territories. The 95 children on the farm are being provided with soya bean milk in regular measured quantities, varying from child to child, and observations kept on improvements in weight in relation to the quantity of this milk consumed. The milk is made on the farm near Sheungshui by the young farmers themselves from materials supplied, at remarkably low cost.

MR. Percy Chen, chairman of the Centre, says that the usual prejudices had to be overcome, but the diet is now being taken with relish. The older Chinese farmers apparently believe that instead of having nutritive value soya bean milk "takes strength from the blood." What they now think, with plain evidence of the marked improvement in the health and energy of the children, will probably take a little longer to find out.

For The Blood, Veins, Arteries and Heart

Take It!

The Wonder Tablet

And Stop Limping

DON'T let Leg Troubles cripple you. Take Elasto, the Great New Biomedical Remedy that cures through the blood, and have done with enforced rest, worry, suffering and expense. Leg aches and pains soon vanish when Elasto is taken. Painful, swollen (varicose) veins are restored to a healthy condition. Skin troubles clear up, leg wounds (that heal) become clean and healthy and quickly heal, inflammation and irritation are soothed, piles disappear, rheumatism simply fades away and the whole system is braced and strengthened. This is not magic, although the relief does seem magical. It is the natural result of revitalised blood and improved circulation brought about by Elasto, the tiny tablet with wonderful healing powers.

Everybody is Asking—What is Elasto?

This question is fully answered in an interesting Booklet, which explains in simple language this amazing new method of curing through the blood. Your copy is Free, see offer below. Suffice to say here that Elasto is not a drug, but a vital cell-food which must be present in the blood to ensure complete health. It restores to the blood the vital elements which combine with the blood albumin to form organic elastic tissue and thus enables Nature to restore elasticity to the broken-down and disintegrated fabric of veins, arteries and heart, and so to re-establish normal healthy circulation, without which there can be no true healing. The health of every organ and tissue of the body depends upon healthy cellular activity, and to ensure this, vigorously circulating, oxygen-rich blood is absolutely essential. NINE TIMES OUT OF TEN THE REAL TROUBLE IS BAD CIRCULATION.

Read What Users of Elasto Say:

"Varicose veins quickly cured after 12 years of useless bandaging."
"I was suffering from neural disease and was not able to walk for months. But now, thanks to Elasto, my heart is quite sound again."
"Completely cured my varicose ulcers."
"Now free from piles."
"The swelling from ankles to thighs has entirely gone, and I can do a full day's work, feeling on my feet all day."
"Elasto has quite cured my eczema."
"Cured my rheumatism and neuritis."
"My heart is quite sound again now."
"My doctor marvelled at my quick recovery from piles," etc.

Telling U.S.

By Edward R. Murrow

TWICE each day a Transatlantic telephone circuit is opened between London and New York. Sometimes London asks New York what the weather is like over there, but New York never puts the same question to London because they both know that discussion of British weather is forbidden.

When the conversation is finished, both of us watching the second hand on the clock, he says: "Cutting up," a switch is thrown in New York, and I hear an announcer over there saying: "Go ahead London." That means that for the next five, ten or 15 minutes, whatever is said from London goes out over the United States.

This has been going on twice each day since before the war started. This is the first planned, consistent effort in American broadcasting to deliver to its listeners an adult news service, which is heard in America once, twenty-third of a second, and it is spoken in London. The sheep rancher in Idaho, the fruit grower in California, the steel worker in Pittsburgh, may hear it through his own loudspeaker by tuning in to his local station.

Often in a quarter-hour period he will hear from London, Berlin and Rome news reports by American observers; men who are making every effort to be temperate, responsible and mature in selecting the manner in which they make the facts of war and its attendant circumstances known to their fellow-countrymen at home. These broadcasts can be as easily heard in America as the B.B.C. six or nine o'clock news in this country; but they include much material not to be found in communiques or official pronouncements.

While we make every effort to avoid colouring the news in terms of personal approval or disapproval, these broadcasts reaching New York at eight o'clock in the morning and at 6.45 in the evening are rather personal, and include many items and impressions not conveyed by any other means. We must always remember that we are talking to people who have never seen Europe, and who are in some cases living a thousand miles from salt water. Basically we are engaged in saying what we see. Our only asset is in being believed.

Often in a quarter-hour period listeners at home will hear completely contradictory official statements quoted from London and Berlin. They can take their choice. But the official news is perhaps less important than the more intimate stories of life, work and sacrifice in Europe to-day. The report of a night with London's fire fighters; a day spent at an advance aerodrome on the coast of Kent while the battle of Dunkirk was on, brings the war much nearer to the wheat farmer in Kansas than any official communication.

I remember seeing those unbent men coming back from Dunkirk; the remnants of one platoon had brought with them a quivering, shell-shocked Belgian mongrel dog. I tried to describe that night, the dog and the men who had brought him back. Of course, the fact that a dog had come to England wasn't news, but it seemed to me the best way of pointing out, of making real to people who hadn't seen it, the scenes at Dover and Folkestone. Radio listeners in America have heard the air-raid sirens in Trafalgar Square; have heard music coming up from underground night clubs, mingling with the sound of low-flying German bombers and the roar of the guns. They have heard the conversation of Londoners in their shelters; and they've heard, too, eyewitness reports from Glasgow, Manchester, Birmingham, Bristol and Belfast.

We have read to them excerpts from leading articles, including those that have criticised the Government. They have heard the speeches of the Prime Minister and the reports of a Pilot-Officer just back from a raid over Berlin.

We have been concerned to hold a mirror behind Britain at war, striving to reflect a true picture by means of the spoken word.

When your leaders or your Press have criticised Government policy, that criticism has often been heard in Vancouver, British Columbia, before the newspapers containing it reached the streets of London.

The material broadcast from here is censored. No censorship is welcome or pleasing to a reporter, but it must be recorded that London censorship, while often slow, is the most liberal in Europe, and it's always well-managed though sometimes stupid.

Since this war began I have received not a single direction from my New York office; have never been told to weigh the news on one side or the other. When responsible British spokesmen or newsmen have criticised American policy, that criticism has gone back across the Atlantic in a matter of hours, or sometimes minutes.

The fact that the British, fearing President Roosevelt's defeat, fostered the story that America would be of more aid as a non-belligerent than as a full ally, and are now engaged in rectifying that mistake, has been reported. More recently, Mr. Willkie's tour, designed as he said to have him contact with the common man, has been reported with the comment that his view of the common man has been considerably obscured by photographers and reporters who would not have been present had Mr. Willkie wished it otherwise.

The conditions in London's shelters were reported to America before they were here; likewise the improvements in bunks and sanitation. The Americans have been told of a policeman who walked a street lit by flames, whistling "Annie Laurie" under his breath, as he tried the door of each little shop, to see that it was securely locked.

American listeners have been told what it's like to get out of London; of a train leaving from a station that has been bombed and burned, according to Dr. Goebbels, but which shows no signs of damage; that dinner on the train was as usual, the coffee still undrinkable and the cheese "just cheese." It doesn't masquerade under such fancy names as Gorgonzola or Stilton, but they still serve little red radishes with it.

They have heard of a tiny village tucked away at the end of a little finger of salt water, far away from the Channel, dozens of houses and one small hotel—a company of red geraniums standing guard in front of a whitewashed stone wall—the landlord, who said: "You'll sleep well here." But I didn't. "All night a gentle breeze off the Channel nibbled and scratched at the thatched roof outside my window—it sounded like incendiaries coming down. The swish of gravel on the beach as each wave retreated resembled the distant sound of falling brick and mortar following a bomb explosion."

The Americans were told how the clang of iron-shod horses' hooves on the stone road was like distant gunfire but it was like the mounted night patrol riding up to Exmoor. Of the local publican in that quiet little valley, who said: "It's too bad some people have to live in terror and fear, being bombed every night, when nothing happens to us. If we could spread it about a bit, all share in it, maybe it wouldn't be so bad."

Perhaps that gave my fellow-countrymen at home some idea of what is meant by this "unity of Britain," of which the politicians speak.

In all this talking to friends and strangers at home there is occasionally an opportunity to draw on past personal experience, such as this on October 1, 1940: "You may tire of these communiques that are just phrases and not news; perhaps you will relax as these people did after Munich."

"It is just two years ago tonight that I sat behind this microphone and reported the signing of that pact. Consider what has happened in those two years; try to ignore what the next two years will bring, if you can. The absence of dramatic news doesn't mean that this war has died down; it means that two peoples are being bent and twisted until one or the other breaks."

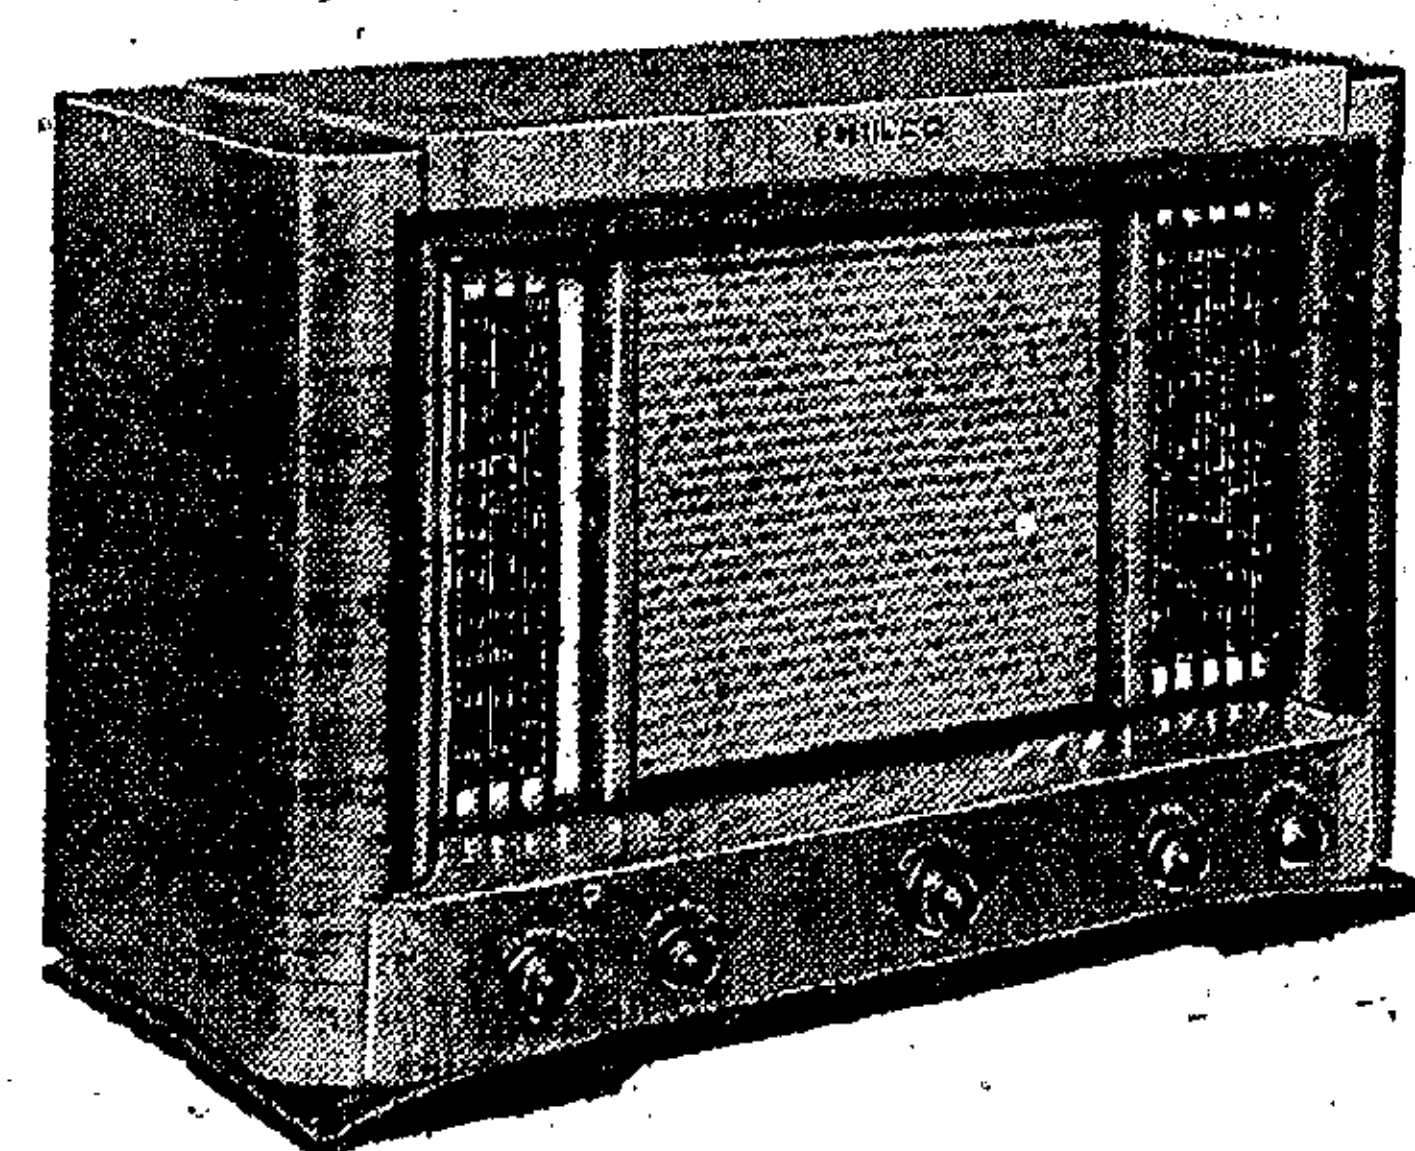

"But perhaps you prefer to believe those who have made so much propaganda about propaganda, trying to convince you that everything from Europe is designed to mislead and misinform you; that nothing can be believed; that we are all told what to say by the Government of the country in which we happen to work."

"It would be pleasant to have some of those debunking, superior gentlemen with one on a night tour of London during a raid. They might come to understand that most of the Americans trying to report this war are writing and talking as honestly as they can, if for no other reason than that they may live in peace with their own conscience. That's an important consideration these days."

APRIL SECRETS

None could have been very regretful four days ago when the month of April, thirty days of meteorological megrims described by the Royal Observatory with a masterly capacity for understatement as "mainly unsettled," was torn off the calendar. The name of the month tinkles prettily on the ear, suggesting poetry and grace, anything but provocation for abuse, but although there may have been an age when it was possible to justify a local adaptation of the fancy of the poet who yearned to be in England "now that April's there," he would this year be treated with the scorn that Mr. Churchill reserves exclusively for Signor Mussolini. That other rhymester, who called upon April to laugh her girlish laughter and, the moment after, weep her girlish tears, was obviously not thinking of the tempestuous outpourings of Mother Nature at her thunderous worst or the fickleness of April, 1941, in Hong Kong. For it is a proxy fact that April's laughter was more often a maliciously malignant lightning flash, and as for April's tears, they were pretty much of a washout.

It was not until the month was over that the Observatory revealed the closely guarded secret of the precise number of inches of rain that washed out our flowerbeds, and closed Clear Water Bay Road, and then most of us were not so much amazed that we had succeeded in enduring the ordeal, but that the sum total of repeated drenchings could be expressed so glibly and simply as "8.69 inches against a normal of 5.20." Suggestion is indeed that the Observatory are keeping a bucket or two up their sleeve, as it were, lest too brutal a revelation of the weather's vexed maltreatment of us might be of use to the enemy. If, for instance, Lord Haw Haw got hold of the true facts, nothing could prevent the accusation in the Zeppen broadcasts that we were trying surreptitiously to steal the Pacific Ocean from under the very keels of the Japanese Navy.

LANTAU

There will be reason for very sharp regret if, because of intervening developments which have altered the whole basis of the scheme as originally conceived, the plans for the establishment of village settlements on Lantau Island and in the Hebe Haven district are permitted to gather cobwebs in an official pigeon-hole. The purpose which permitted the first steps to be taken, is no longer an influence. The question now is whether, in its simpler proportions, the scheme is strong enough to stand upon its own merits as a measure of social improvement. That is a question which, finally, can be answered only by experts, able to establish whether the areas chosen are suitable for agricultural development on a useful scale, whether the water supply is adequate for all predictable occasions, and whether the malaria menace in Lantau can be effectively controlled in reasonably short time. On these points, some preliminary reassurances have been provided, and if further investigation substantiates the findings, it would be a pity indeed were the idea to lapse because interest has faded with the original incentive. In the beginning, obviously, some subvention from Government would be necessary to enable settlers to establish a firm foothold, but if it can be shown that, like the thousands of small farmers operating in the New Territories, they can within reasonable time support themselves, it would be money well spent. It is for the sponsors to show, by facts and figures, that the community is being asked to promote an undertaking secure on its foundations. If that can be done, it would be lamentably short-sighted to suffer any unnecessary delay. If we can afford $350,000 to lop a few corners off the Taipo Road, we can afford to give some hundreds of slum dwellers a little whole some air to breathe.

THE FOUR HORSEMEN

Eastern Peril

By H. N.
Brailsford

An anxious bit of steering has fallen to Mr. Churchill.

Japan has compelled us to prepare on the assumption that she may be thinking of abandoning her status as a sleeping partner of the Axis for full-blooded belligerency. Her army in China has been inactive for some time, and her navy has its hands free.

It is probable that the world exaggerates the military power of her ambitious empire. It did not shine in recent operations against the Red Army in Mongolia; its air force has never been tested; while its fleet won its renown a generation ago against the obsolete ships of Tsarist Russia in decay.

It is subject to two notorious handicaps. It has to import most of the raw materials of war, notably oil. What reserves it may have we do not know, but at some moment, late or soon, the Dutch, British, and Americans, if they acted in concert, could by oil barges, reduce it to immobility. That is so clear that the certainty that they would so act should suffice to deter Japan from anything but the briefest campaign.

That means, in plain words, that Japan is unlikely to open a war against us unless she believes that Hitler can make good his boast to destroy us this summer. Even then, would she risk it, if she had to reckon that her entry into the war would bring in America also?

If her own lack of oil hampers her movements against us, distance also is a formidable handicap.

When the Japanese express their uneasiness because we have fortified Singapore, we are fond of reminding them that this naval base of ours is 3,000 miles distant from Japan; the Atlantic is no wider. It is comforting to reflect that Japan is as far from Singapore as Singapore is from Japan.

But while we have been absorbed in defending our own island, the Japanese have been steadily reducing this distance. In the hour of France's collapse, they compelled the French to give them the use of the railways and airfields in their colony of Indo-China—extensively to further their campaign against the Chinese Republic.

The next phase is even more disturbing. The independent kingdom of Thailand, which we used to call Siam, now comes on the stage.

It has a vigorous popular movement, which carried out a successful political revolution a few years ago and swept away the absolute, old-world, divine king, to set up a regency and a totalitarian party.

It is intensely nationalist, and has been engaged in purging its business life of foreigners, both British and Chinese. Because it dreaded chiefly the two European empires, that press on its borders, it opened its doors wide to Japanese influence in the rather naive belief that it could play off one empire against the other two.

It is not likely that its leaders are eager to submit themselves to Japan's New Order, for Asiatic imperialism is cruder and more ruthless than either of the older European varieties. But Japan had two good cards to play: she buys increasing quantities of the chief Thai export, rice, and she shares with Thailand some nominal allegiance to the Buddhist religion.

Against the French, Thailand had a grievance of long standing: the rape of two of her Eastern provinces, which the French took by the same title that gave Japan Korea, Manchuria, Formosa, and two-thirds of China.

It was inevitable that the Thai nationalists should use the moment of French collapse to demand the restoration of this territory. That gave Mr. Matsukata, the bustling pupil of American big business, who now conducts the diplomacy of Japan, his step in as "mediator."

By so doing, he established the Mikado's claim to act as the overlord of the whole Far East. He debated a settlement in favour of Thailand, and Vichy dare not for shame ask the aid of the ally it despised. Resistance would be hopeless if the French would make common cause.

Falling that, we may have to look on, while the Japanese establish themselves more firmly than ever in Indo-China and Thailand.

And so the peril creeps nearer; the Japanese are overcoming the handicap of distance.

There remains for them the problem of their oil supply. That may engage them next; for once established in Indo-China and Thailand, they would be within striking distance of the Dutch oil-wells in Java.

All this, let me reassure the reader, sounds more alarming than it really is.

Bases of a kind the Japanese may secure in this way, but nothing that would be of much use to a battleship.

Singapore is the only great naval station in this part of the world. The Dutch have the means to join us in a resolute resistance, and if the worst came to the worst, would blow up their oil-wells.

Australia, meanwhile, has been hard hit, but spirit will not expect from her, and her men are waiting in Malaya to prove their mettle once again.

Mr. Matsukata's diplomacy has been clumsy. It was not clever of him to offer his unwanted mediation in this war, a move that annoyed Berlin as much as it amused London.

Nor was it clever to chatter to journalists about Japan's claims to "Oceania," the islands on which she proposes to plant countless millions of her colonists.

Java, which she chiefly wants for the sake of its oil, happens to be more densely peopled than England. There may be room on Sumatra, Borneo, and New Guinea, but, if so, the Chinese and Indians have a claim, though they lack the battleships to enforce it.

One day, if we dared to dream, an International Authority may reconcile this cry for living space with the rights of the primitive natives of these islands.

But this is not the time to dream: we are at grips with a relentless enemy, and we may have to meet his Eastern partner also.

The future would be easier to decipher if we knew how the American Congress would respond to a challenge to Oceania. Mr. Roosevelt's inclinations are clearer to read.

THIS WEEK

Impression of lull, created by the hush while the world waited grimly anxious for the veil to be lifted from the fate of the B.E.F. Greece, deceived few. The flare-up in Iran, if of small immediate consequence, is a sharp warning enough that there is to be no respite now that the principal opponents are firmly engaged. If Hitler seems to pause, it is because he gathers poise for his next spring. The world, all the portents proclaim, is on the edge of tremendous events, with the war threatening to spread across every sea and every sky. British resource and British endurance will be sorely tested before many weeks are passed.

United States Awake

Fortunately, there is no longer any doubt that the United States is fully awake to the gravity of the crisis. Events in the Balkans have exposed, as none of his earlier military subjugations succeeded in doing, Hitler's ambitions in all their giant character. Those still deceived by the elusive straw of neutrality, or the lunacies of the Lindberghs, are a rapidly diminishing quantity. Nazism is now seen as a challenge to the most elementary privileges of civilised men among all peoples in all continents, including America, and the United States, increasingly faced with the dilemma of creating war supplies which may be sunk en route, is growing less and less willing to accept it.

on balance, nothing of which the Allies need be the least ashamed, a great deal of which they have a right to be proud.

Turkey Surkeast

The swiftness of the German success has undoubtedly shaken Turkey. And the occupation of Samothrace, Lemnos and other islands in the Aegean has not eased Soviet fears. Far from any indication, however, that Turkey is overawed by the German success, the President has been touring defence positions, military precautions have been intensified at all threatened points, and mobilisation is proceeding on an important scale. Turkey plays for time, but nothing has occurred to suggest any weakening of determination to resist any encroachment upon her independence.

Rashid Ali's Blunder

Developments in Iraq mere confirmed first instincts as to the meaning of Rashid Ali's coup, d'état a month ago. Rashid seems, however, to have released the trigger too soon, and the flagrant incidents at Habbaniyah are not likely to be settled until the status quo ante has been restored. The announcement that Rashid has appealed to Hitler for help lends piquancy to the situation, for it will be exceedingly interesting to see how the Fuehrer helps his "friends" when the role that has invariably been Britain's is reversed.

Moving Towards War

An overwhelming majority of Americans are already ready to authorise President Roosevelt to protect the transport of war materials to Britain. More than 80 per cent are prepared for direct participation in America in the war. One influential Republican newspaper has come out plainly, urging that Britain must not stand alone. They now realise that for America, the great Battle of the Atlantic is as vital for them as it is for Britain. From now on, the enormous production power of the United States, Britain may hold the gap alone; with American naval aid, it would be guaranteed.

Generalship Supreme

As the worst had been feared, when the actual facts of the evacuation of the British and Imperial forces from Greece were made known, they brought tremendous relief. Mr. Churchill's inspiring broadcast on Sunday had taken the edge off any black news that might be in store. It cleared the air, drew a broader and complete picture of the war situation as a whole and put things in their proper perspective. It is more than probable that the Prime Minister himself was later agreeably surprised by the magnitude of the achievement of British generalship, which, with the skillful cooperation of Admiral Cunningham's ships, brought 80 per cent of the British and Anzac forces out of Greece to fight another day.

Inevitability of Evacuation

Sense of tragedy and disaster was further sensibly minimised by the revelation of Mr. Anthony Eden that the retreat assumed important proportions, with inevitability of evacuation, only when the Greek Government were forced to the sad decision that the Greek armies were so near exhaustion that they could no longer guarantee to continue the struggle against such tremendous odds. Even so, Anglo-Greek relations have survived the hard test unimpaired. The Greeks fought heroically for six months, and their forces were still fighting side by side with Britain when the battle reached the Peloponnese. It required the main continental armies of the Axis Powers to evict from the Greek mainland forces a fraction their size, bearing in mind the tremendous losses inflicted on the Germans, there is

The Battle Of Egypt

In Libya, the stage is being now set for the real battle. The weight and persistence of the new onslaught on the Tobruk defences is the measure both of the seriousness of German determination to pursue the campaign into Egypt and of how severely the Tobruk, thorn in the side has been felt. The fever operations out of Sollum have made some, but no substantial progress. General Wavell's strategy possibly envisages holding the Huns in front of Sidi Barrani until May is well in and retreating on the prepared defences at Matruh. Operations in the desert between Sidi Barrani and Mersa Matruh, he may be well content to leave to the Germans in an Egyptian June. Mr. Churchill expressed, he said, only his personal opinion, but few military men would disagree with the sentiment that he would rather be in General Wavell's shoes than Rommel's.

Delaying Action

Cleaning up operations in East Africa are still inevitably taking up a lot of time. But the extent of the war material which fell into South African hands at Desfontaines, without a fight, before the Duke of Aosta's last main stronghold fell, is evidence enough that the Duke has now no greater ambition than the role of will-o'-the-wisp. No fighting spirit seems to be left in the Italian remnant armies.

Inscrutable

Soviet policy cannot be assessed in ordinary terms. The Kremlin plays its own inscrutable game. Stories come out of Moscow of a powerful American fighting command in Finland, of the instant readiness of the Red Army for action in any sphere of "imperialist aggression against the Soviet Union." Motive of Russia in rivaling Goebbels with regard to Finland and Singapore remains an enigma, but it would seem to lack meaning unless it is anti-Axis in implication.

Coming Or Going?

Japan's meantime marks time, whilst launching a series of trial balloons apparently testing American receptiveness to half-hints that Japan is in the mood for accommodation in the Pacific. The campaign has been accompanied, however, by publication of weird and wonderful "peace terms" for a solution of world problems in the English-language Gaimusho organ in Tokyo. If intended as another balloon d'essai, anything more astounding in its naivete could hardly be conceived. Equally interesting, and amusing, is the effort of Japanese politicians to settle in their own minds the full implications of the Neutrality Pact so recently signed in Moscow. They seem, indeed, to be sharing the doubts expressed overseas as to whether Japan is coming or going.

Plymouth's Hour

Plymouth has had to bear the brunt of the continued Luftwaffe attacks on the British Isles. Large parts of the Devonshire port have been utterly ravaged, in a series of raids more savage than any visited upon other provincial centres. Heavy raids on Merseyside and South Wales last night, tactics with the unceasing ebb and flow of the Battle of the Atlantic, though a daylong bombardment of the Dover area by Big Bertha at Cape Gris-Nez sent invasion "hopes" soaring among those just waiting for Hitler to try "England's" light little island stands erect through all such ordeals. There is no term to the endurance of people such as those at Plymouth, whose response to Goebbels' worst is but colder earnestness about the job of smashing Hitler.

SCRUTATOR.

Battle Of Ideas:

The Shifting Balance

By Anne McCormick

When we warned Moscow that the Germans were likely to turn east, to seize the granaries of the Ukraine and the oil fields of the Caucasus, Mr. Churchill was referring to something more than the general threat Stalin counter-attacked when he turned the German drive westward by signing the Nazi-Soviet pact. The Prime Minister was speaking openly of a definite plan of which London and Washington have long had credible evidence. The plan, worked out to the last detail, is supposed to have been discussed at a recent meeting of the German war council as the alternative course to be followed in the event that the campaign against England fails.

It goes without saying that the evidence that the alternative to a victory over Britain was an attack on Russia was made known to Moscow. Why it was believed that such evidence might push Stalin to assist the British in bringing about Hitler's defeat is not quite clear.

The hope was fed on the signs of Soviet uneasiness as the German war machine crashed into the Balkans. When the full story of the Yugoslav coup becomes known, no doubt it will be seen that Moscow played an important part in the drama. Behind the cynicism of the Kremlin's rebuke to Hungary for doing to Yugoslavia what Russia did in Poland, lies a real, resentment at the break-up of the kingdom of the South Slavs. It is not lost upon the Russians that no German troops were withdrawn from the Soviet frontier for the Balkan campaign.

Yet Moscow has made another pact as sensational in its way as the agreement of August, 1939, which sent Hitler smashing into Poland.

Is this the answer to the question that has hung suspended over the Balkans?

Does it mean that the new threat to Russia, growing out of the Nazi drive toward the Straits has frightened Stalin into moving closer to Germany instead of into the opposing camp?

Is the Soviet dictator taking the same precaution Hitler took when he made terms with Russia in order to avoid fighting on two fronts?

Or is the agreement with Japan just another instance of the consistency of Soviet policy? In every move since the war began, Moscow has acted to turn every possible attack in another direction and encourage every other country to fight if thereby the war can be kept away from Russia.

The great illusion of the demagogue is the belief that Moscow desires their victory more than Berlin, Rome or Tokyo do. It is true that the logic of the world situation makes Hitler's success as deadly a danger to Russia as it is a smashing defeat for Italy. But the peril to their country is overshadowed for the dictators by the danger to their personal power and the knowledge that they will all be wrecked together if the forces of freedom win over the forces of despotism. It should never be forgotten, moreover, that they are all out to destroy the order, the economy, the culture, the basic assumptions by which we live.

It begins to be very clear, however, that Stalin and Hitler pursue completely different methods. One hopes to win the world by war, the other by keeping out of war. One spreads his gospel by fire and sword, the other waits to reap the harvest of chaos when fire and sword have done their work. One pays homage for his conquests, the other sits back and collects tribute.

Calculated in terms of the war balance, the Balkan campaign, for instance, cost Hitler more than it was worth. What has Germany gained on this peninsula that she did not have before? The British have lost their hold on the Continent, which will not affect the outcome of the war. The Yugoslavs and the Greeks may suffer what they suffered in the last war and come back, as they did before, stronger than ever. But the Germans have paid heavily for what they expected to have delivered free of charge. The Serbs hated the Germans, but they were obliged by the necessities of economics and geography to supply them regularly with food, copper and other valuable goods. The Greeks did not hate the Germans and used almost nothing but German manufactured goods.

Thus the most the Nazis could win was two more hostile populations to police, more sabotage and reduced supplies. The labour that served them has been diverted, and the damage done to towns, railways and farmlands will take months to repair.

Much more important in the sum of forces is the assault on Egypt and the still-hidden effects of the pact signed by Matsukata and Stalin in Moscow. For these moves outside Europe are bids not for continental but for world power. They challenge Britain in her empire and illuminate the real issues and alignments in a global struggle.

Authoritative Account Of Campaign By War Office

AIR WAR OVER THE DESERT

The R.A.F. destroyed 12 enemy aircraft in the Middle East in the week ending May 1.

This was fewer than the previous week but the number of aircraft destroyed on the ground was considerable.

British losses in the whole Mediterranean area, Abyssinia and Malta were 10. Oil tankers were destroyed at El Argub, 80 miles from Benghazi, while in the Sollum area heavy casualties were inflicted on German troops near Gambut.

In East Africa the aerodromes at Benina and Derna were repeatedly raided with considerable casualties to troop-carriers and troops. The aerodromes at Kumbuleha, Macanra, Gimma and Tandho were also raided.

Fifty direct hits were observed on an enemy fortress at the Pass of Falag.

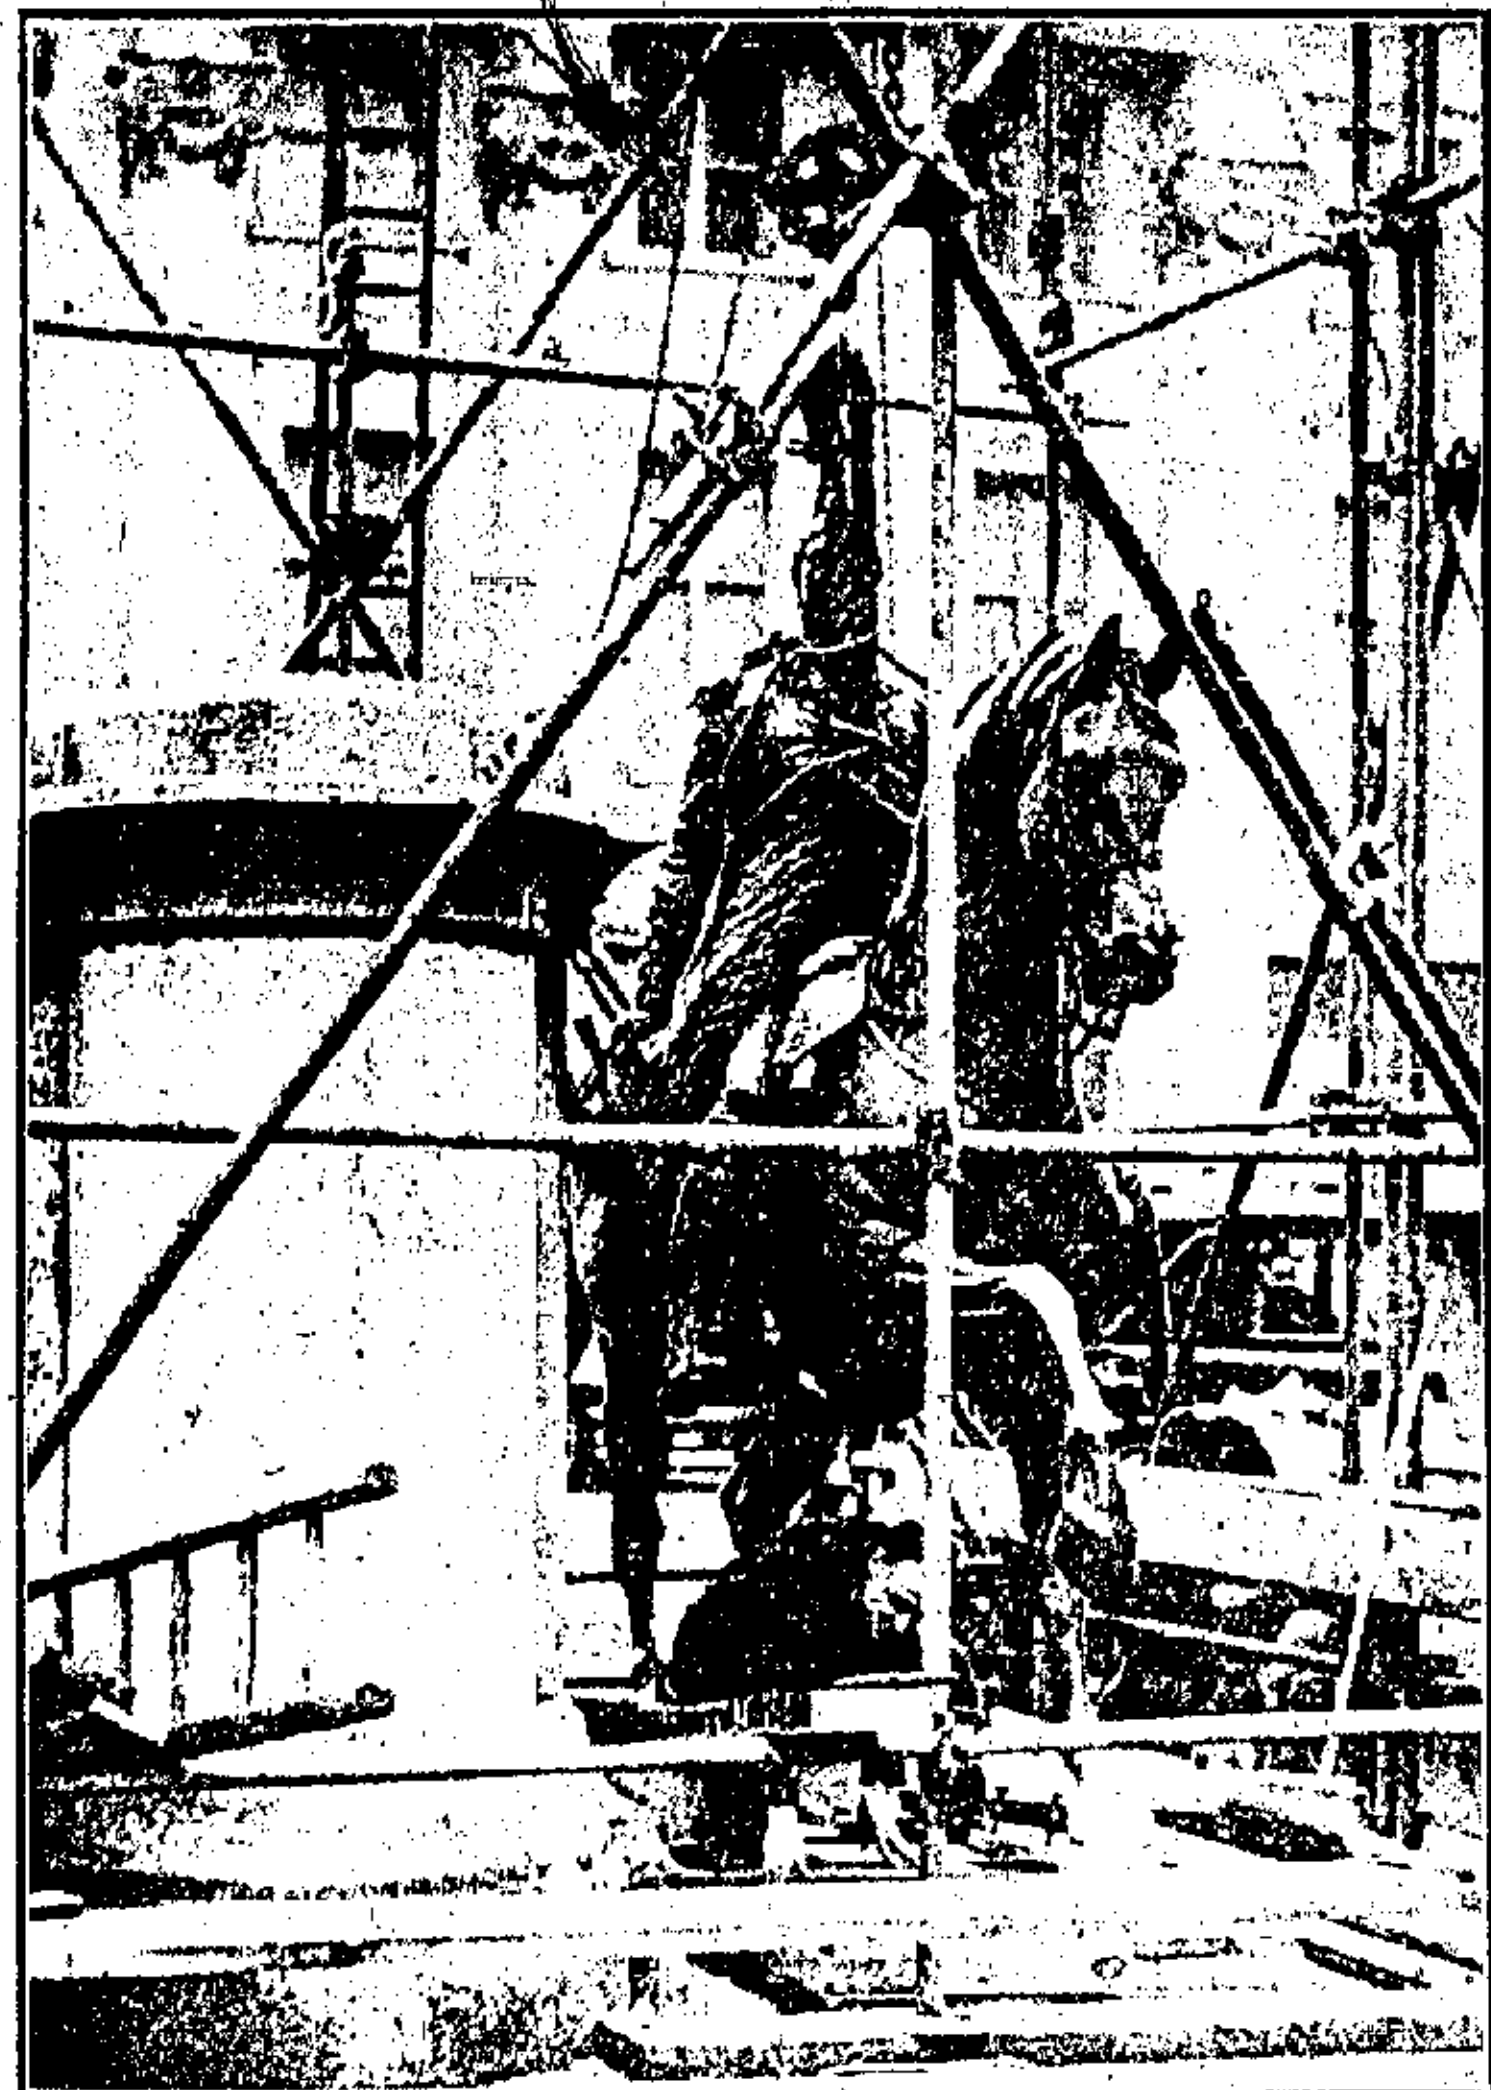

Night Raids

Four heavy night raids were carried out on Benghazi harbour.

During April 252 enemy aircraft were shot down by fighters of the Middle East Command, and British losses were 58 in the Western Desert. A total of 123 enemy aircraft was destroyed in East Africa, against a loss of 54 by the R.A.F. — Reuter.

Anzac Brigade Fights Two Nazi Divisions In Gorge

HOW A SMALL ANZAC FORCE, FIGHTING AGAINST A GREATLY SUPERIOR ENEMY FORCE, HELD A GORGE IN THE REGION OF MOUNT OLYMPUS WHILE THE MAIN BODY OF THE BRITISH IMPERIAL FORCES WITHDREW, IS ONE OF MANY TALES OF HEROISM WHICH APPEAR THROUGH THE TERSE TECHNICAL PHRASEOLOGY OF THE OFFICIAL ACCOUNT OF THE FIGHTING IN GREECE PUBLISHED BY THE WAR OFFICE.

In this "gallant rearguard action" about one brigade of Anzacs blocked the gorge against two German divisions — odds which can be roughly estimated at about 10 to one.

This is how the War Office tells the story:—

On April 15, a small New Zealand force which held the eastern entrance to Peneios Gorge, south of Mount Olympus, was heavily engaged by a greatly superior enemy force and driven back. Next day two battalions of an Australian brigade went to its support.

This small Anzac force, of about a brigade group, fought two German divisions in Peneios Gorge. Its losses were heavy but the withdrawal was secured on our right flank.

Stopping The Rot

An earlier episode in the same account tells of an attempt by the Imperial forces to stop the rot which developed after the collapse of Yugoslav resistance in the south by barring German egress from Monastir Gap.

By the evening of April 7 the disaster to the Yugoslav forces was apparent and the threat to Monastir Gap had become a reality.

A small reserve, under a brigadier, consisting of a machine-gun battalion, and some medium artillery, was formed near Amintion, south of Florina.

Hot Attack

Next morning General Mackay was sent with his division headquarters, one anti-tank regiment and one Australian brigade less one battalion, to augment this force, which remained in the neighbourhood of Amintion to await the Germans.

On April 9 the Germans attacked General Mackay's force during this and next day. The Imperial forces inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy but it became apparent that a stand could not be maintained indefinitely against the greatly superior German numbers.

If the enemy could not be held at Amintion it was clear that the whole line on this front must be withdrawn, otherwise it would be outflanked.

On April 11, therefore, the Imperial and Greek forces began to withdraw to a new line. The official account comments on the unpreparedness of the Yugoslav forces to resist an unforewarned German offensive.

Yugoslavia, though partly mobilised, was not ready for war, and the War Office adds that the disposition of the Yugoslav forces appears to have been governed not alone by military but also by political considerations, and inadequate forces had been allotted to the south of the country, where the real threat lay.

The disaster had been planned by the Teletkovitch Government, and General Simovitch had no time to revise the plans.

A further withdrawal to a position at Thermopylae was effected under very heavy enemy bombing. The official account remarks that the artillery of both the British Army and the Anzac forces played an important part in the campaign.

UNDOUBTEDLY IT INFLECTED VERY HEAVY CASUALTIES AND THE GERMANS THEMSELVES TESTIFIED TO THE ACCURACY OF OUR SHOOTING.

The story concludes with the withdrawal to points of embarkation covered by one New Zealand brigade. The evacuation was effected from various beaches in Attica, Argolis and the Peloponnese. — Reuter.

Authorised Account

It is now possible to give an authoritative account in some detail of the campaign in Greece between the German aggression of April 6 and the embarkation of the forces of the British Empire which began in the last week of April.

At 5.45 a.m. on April 6 the Germans crossed the Bulgarian-Greek frontier. There was no warning or ultimatum but the probability of a German attack had been obvious for some time on the Metaxas Line, which runs along the frontier at five points — down the Struma Valley to Rupel Pass, over Nevrokop Plateau towards Drama, towards Zanta, towards Domotina, and from Svilengrad down Maritsa Valley.

The last line of advance was not seriously opposed, nor was it intended to be, and the enemy reached the sea at Dede Agas on April 9. Elsewhere the Greeks successfully withstood the initial German attacks and inflicted heavy casualties.

Parachute Troops

At Rupel Pass the Germans employed parachute troops, dropping 150 behind the Greek lines. Of these 100 were quickly killed and the remainder were captured.

A plan of the Greek and British Commands was to make the high ground west of Vardar Valley the main defensive position and to delay the Germans on the Metaxas Line.

It was intended to inflict the maximum damage on the enemy in eastern Macedonia and Greek Thrace, but if necessary, to withdraw from that part of Greece which lies east of the main defensive line including, therefore, Salonika.

It was expected there would be an opportunity for the orderly withdrawal of Greek forces in this area. However, since the outbreak of the attack on Greece, the Germans invaded Yugoslavia which, though partly mobilised, was not ready for war.

No Ultimatum

As with Greece, no ultimatum or other warning was given. Consequently the Germans were able to advance rapidly up Strumitsa Valley past both sides of Lake Doiran and down Vardar Valley. They reached Salonika on the evening of April 8.

The three Greek divisions in the East were cut off from the main body of the Allied forces.

But the rapidity of the German advance in Yugoslavia held a yet more serious threat. Skopje and Vales were reached on April 8 and it was evident that Monastir Gap was threatened.

Consideration of the disposition of the Greek forces and the forces of the British Empire which had come to their aid reveals how serious this was.

By far the greater part of the Greek Army was in Albania, some 30 to 40 miles away from the Greek frontier, with its left flank on the sea and its right flank on the Yugoslav frontier.

Two Greek divisions and the Imperial troops, all under the command of General Wilson, who was in his turn under that of the Greek Commander-in-Chief, General Papagos, had taken up a strong natural line of defence running from the sea near Katerini through Varis and Edessa to the Yugoslav frontier.

Demolition Work

A British armoured force was sent to the east of this line engaged in demolition work and similar activities.

The force under General Wilson, therefore, was opposing the Germans along a front of 60 to 70 miles on the east, while to the west the main bulk of the Greek Army was opposing the Italians along a front of similar length.

Between the two, the mountains of southern Yugoslavia formed a barrier pierced by Monastir Gap. This frontier was manned only by Greek mountain guards.

By the evening of April 7, the disaster to the Yugoslav forces was apparent and the threat to Monastir Gap had become a reality.

The armoured force was ordered to blow the demolitions and withdraw to Edessa, behind the Australian division under whose orders it was placed.

These preparations to meet the threat through Monastir Gap were made only just in time.

On April 9 the Germans appeared south of Florina and hotly engaged General Mackay's force during this and next day. The Imperial force inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy but it became apparent that a stand could not be made indefinitely against the greatly superior German numbers. — British Wireless.

FAMOUS CRICKETER MISSING

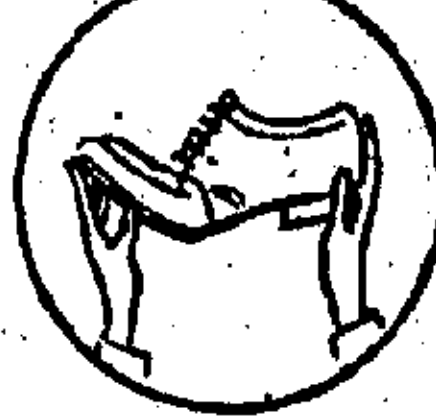

The South African cricketer, R. J. Crisp, is reported missing in the evacuation of Greece, says Reuter from Durban.

Crisp, who also played for Worcestershire, represented South Africa against England in several Tests. He is 30 years old.

He has twice taken four wickets with consecutive balls, playing on both occasions for Western Province.

ON SKIN CARE

How can you help to maintain a good skin condition even in the hot weather? You need fresh air and exercise, so beware of the temptations always to take a car when you could walk or cycle.

What can you do externally for your skin? First of all you can keep it scrupulously clean. I have the highest regard for all the excellent cleansing creams and lotions that are to be bought. But I always brackish with them a good soap and plenty of water.

I refuse to believe in a skin so sensitive that it cannot stand good soap and water. If you tell me that your skin is that way, then I reply that you must be using the wrong soap. Not necessarily a bad or cheap soap, but merely one that happens not to suit your skin. As a last resource you might even try a baby soap.

The correct way to wash is to use pleasantly warm water for the washing and then to follow with a cold rinse. The warm water and soap gets rid of impurities and dead skin, the cold water tones and stimulates. It improves the circulation and firms and refines the skin.

What of 'cleansing creams'? Some of these contain mineral oil. This has a slightly drying effect and so is useful for the oily type of skin. Girls with very dry skins may not be able to use this.

KNITTING HINTS

Working into the backs of cast on stitches to obtain a firm edge is unnecessary if you follow this method.

Take two needles and wool and make a loop in the ordinary way. Then instead of putting the right hand needle through the loop on the left hand needle, put it behind the loop, put wool round, and draw stitch through.

This is very simple and gives a beautifully elastic, but firm edge, and at the same time does away with the unpleasant task of knitting into the back of the stitch on the first row of knitting.

After casting on in this new way the pattern may be commenced immediately.

When finishing off knitted garments, remember that plain parts only should be pressed. Ribbing and raised patterns are best left alone.

To straighten bent needles, stand them in a jug of boiling water until they become soft and pliable, when they can be easily restored.

High Blood Pressure Dangerous to Heart

Thousands of men and women pass each day the dangers of heart trouble and paralysis because of High Blood Pressure. High Blood Pressure is a mysterious disease that causes more deaths than cancer, largely because people mistake the symptoms for indigestion or some simple trouble. Common symptoms are: Pressure in the head, headache, dizziness, short breath, nervousness, poor sleep, heart pain, drowsiness, loss of memory and energy. If you suffer any of these symptoms do not delay a single day for your life may be in danger. Start treatment at once with Hyonox, which reduces High Blood Pressure with the first dose, takes a heavy load off the heart, and makes you feel years younger in a few days. Get Hyonox from your chemist today. It is guaranteed to make you feel fit and strong or money back.

type of cream at all, and they do well to cleanse the skin with a complexion milk, or a cold cream. A cold cream is a very effective means of removing grime from the skin, particularly if it is followed by a cold rinse or a mild tonic. Cold cream softens the skin at the same time as it cleanses.

If your skin is heavily greasy then a liquid cleanser is probably the best choice. This type also benefits from the use of fine oatmeal. Try making a lather of soap in the palms of the hands. Sprinkle with fine oatmeal and then rub the mixture into the skin. Alternatively you can make a good cleanser by mixing equal parts of green soft soap with fine oatmeal and warm water. This not only cleanses but provides just enough friction to cleanse clogged pores and prevent the formation of blackheads.

You read a great deal in the advertisements about stimulating the skin. What exactly does this mean?

Briefly it means stirring up the circulation of the blood in the tiny vessels of the face. What good does this do?

First of all, a good circulation means elimination of blemishes. It creates that lovely glow that shines through the skin and is the chief charm of a child's skin. It tones up the pores so that your skin does not get that heavy, sluggish appearance, and it also controls the oil glands of the skin—increasing the flow when the skin is too dry, and decreasing it where the glands are over active.

Now, then, shall we stimulate, for there are a lot of pitfalls and too drastic a treatment is worse than none at all.

A stimulating mask is about the easiest method—and the safest, if you buy a good proprietary brand and use it according to the makers' directions. Beware of too many cheap home-made concoctions applied with vigorous massage, or slappings, and beware of using ice as is often advised. The results too often are sagged, ill-used muscles and a network of broken veins.

I am all for massage if it is applied by someone who knows. Otherwise, if you do it yourself, stop short at the small upward and outward movements of the finger tips that will be sufficient to massage in your feeding cream. Neither should you continuously resort to the use of steaming and hot towels. You can ruin your skin and make it relax for ever in this way.

If you already have broken veins, strong bronzings and sunburning marks and best left alone. Cold water is the only astringent that this kind of skin needs or can tolerate.

It is not possible to lay down rules about feeding creams. Your aim must be to keep your skin healthy and elastic. It is the loss of elasticity that gives a skin an aged and wrinkled appearance. Experiment with them till you find the cream that suits your type of skin. Remember, however, that it doesn't follow that a dry skin needs a heavy cream. It may be that way, but some dry skins benefit more from a light cream.

As for foundation, here again the type of skin must be considered.

This by no means rules out vanishing creams and liquid foundations and make-up. You must experiment and find out for yourself.

Bankers Give Thanks

A BANQUET, attended by two hundred leading British and American financiers, was held in the Splendid Hotel last night, to celebrate the destruction of wealth caused by the war.

The Chairman, Sir Otto Norrmann, said it was a matter for mutual congratulation that the wholesale destruction of food, machinery, buildings, raw material and every kind of wealth was now proceeding at a greater rate than they had been able to achieve, and in a manner for which no one would ever think of blaming the financiers. (Applause.)

They would all agree that the object of a sound banking system was to bring about a scarcity of this world's goods by carefully restricting the means of purchasing them. Their motive in this was not, as some critics averred, personal profit or the acquisition of power, but the encouragement of the virtue of abstinence and the safeguarding of the people from the sins of luxury and surfeit. (Hear, hear, and a voice, "Amen!")

In an age when technical science had made abundance possible for all mankind, it was no easy task to persuade people to do without the wealth that lay so ready to their hands.

It had been uphill work, yet they had achieved amazing success. All over the world there had been men engaged in destroying what they had produced and the food they needed, and living in poverty while surrounded by the means to affluence. (Applause.)

Let them recall some characteristic achievements in their campaign to create scarcity in a world of abundance.

In one year, Argentina burned 500,000 cattle; Australia reduced her wheat crop by 37,000,000 bushels, and Canada by 2,000,000 acres; the Lancashire Cotton Corporation decided to dismantle 30 per cent of their mills; America ploughed in every third row of cotton (cheers); and Portugal threw away 10,000,000 gallons of wine (a voice, "Not so good!" and laughter).

In 1933, the Liverpool Fruit Association dumped 1,500,000 oranges into the sea (cries of "Are they still there?" and "Divers, forward!" and laughter).

No less remarkable than actual destruction were their success in restricting production. When they remembered that at one time farmers were being subsidised for not growing food, stock-breeders for not breeding stock, and railways actually paid 2s. 1d. per pig for not carrying pigs, they would realise how determined were the politicians and economists to let no obstacle stand between them and scarcity (Cheers.)

How was it (continued Sir Otto) that they, a mere handful of humble financiers, had succeeded in implanting this ideal of poverty in the mind of civilised man at the very historic moment when they might have expected the world to be submerged by a deluge of wealth?

Propaganda was surely too prosaic a term to describe a force of suggestion which induced the enlightened democracies of the western world to starve in the midst of plenty. In all history, there had never been a more triumphant example of the Power of Hypnotic Suggestion.

Realising, with Voltaire, that "Superstitions are the kings of nations," they had set themselves the task of convincing the world that a permanent shortage of money was a law of nature.

And they had succeeded. Wise and simple, learned and illiterate, ruler and subject alike, all had succumbed to this fantastic illusion. The babes had swallowed it as readily as the wise and prudent. With all modesty, they would say that as a publicity campaign it had been the World's Outstanding Wow. (Prolonged cheers.)

Yet, despite their triumphs, they had realised in recent years that this happy state of things could not last.

As some statesman or other had once observed—doubtless in a moment of depression—you cannot fool all the people all the time.

COSSACK STEP

The Cossack Step, reminiscent of Cossack dances, is an exercise which gives general balance and is excellent for 'tummies'. Place hands on hips, fingers firmly placed over abdomen, bend so that weight is on toes of feet with heels almost touching, shoulders and back perfectly straight. Now with a spring, shoot the right leg out straight. Spring again, bringing the right leg back and shooting out the left. Try to keep an easy balance on the toes without wobbling.

The "Swing-Over" helps to tone up and strengthen leg and 'tummy' muscles. Lie flat on the floor, hands at sides. Now toss the legs over the head somewhat, if possible, the toes touch the floor (backwards). Make the backward swing over quite rapidly, pause a moment, then swing back.

TOE DANCING for pretty feet and ankles. You can slip your shoes off at odd moments to practise this exercise. Sit down on a stool or chair. Raise and lower your feet, keeping the insteps taut and the toes always pointing directly downwards to the floor. Make the movements with little jerks, as if you were doing a tap or toe dance. Repeat about twelve times. If you have weak arches, do this 'dance' three or four times daily and the benefit will be considerable.

The Whirligig is especially designed for ankle-glancing—another exercise that can be done at odd moments. Take up the same position as for Toe Dancin', or cross one knee over the other. Revolve the foot slowly in a wide circle, using a good deal of strength. Repeat twelve to twenty times clockwise and the same number anti-clockwise.

CHANGES IN CABINET
Lord Beaverbrook's New Position
Right Hand Man Of Mr. Churchill

THE APPOINTMENT OF LORD BEAVERBROOK AS MINISTER OF STATE WILL RELIEVE HIM ENTIRELY OF DEPARTMENTAL DUTIES AND ENABLE HIM TO DEVOTE HIMSELF TO GENERAL QUESTIONS OF POLICY WHICH OCCUPY THE WAR CABINET.

The "News Chronicle," in a tribute to Lord Beaverbrook, says his work at the Ministry is finished. He performed it grandly.

As announced, Lord Beaverbrook is succeeded as Minister of Aircraft Production by Colonel Moore-Brabazon who, says the "Daily Telegraph," has by common consent done well at the Transport Ministry. His new office, it adds, will suit him still better.

Col. Moore-Brabazon was a pioneer motorist in England and holds the first pilot's certificate ever issued by the Royal Aero Club. The amalgamation for war purposes of the Departments of Shipping and Transport under the new Minister, Mr. J. F. Leathers—who began his business career as an office boy in the company of which he is now managing director—is regarded as an important development which should tend to greater efficiency.

Minor Changes

Minor Ministerial appointments announced were: Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Aircraft Production, Mr. Frederick Montague—British Wireless.

MIDDLESEX MAN GIVEN BENEFIT OF THE DOUBT

L/CPL. THOMAS JAMES MILROY, 24, of the Middlesex Regiment, was discharged yesterday when he appeared at Kowloon, on remand, with two Chinese, on charges of demanding money with menaces. The two Chinese, Tsang Wing-fuk, alias Tsang Fuk, 45, seaman, and Lo Lai-tong, 21, were convicted and fined $500, or four months' hard labour, and $200, or three months, respectively.

All three were charged with demanding $300 with menaces from Lo Yau on February 27 and a further $20 with menaces from Kan Ho on February 7.

Det.-Sgt. C. Downman prosecuted and Mr. C. d'Almeida appeared for Milroy, while Mr. C. A. S. Russ was for the two Chinese defendants.

The prosecution alleged that they went to a village in Kowloon City, declaring they were Government officers. They threatened that they would pull down their huts if the occupants did not pay them tea money.

Did Not Understand

In defence, Milroy stated that he was asked by Tsang Fuk to act as a solicitor when they went to collect the money from the two complainants. Tsang Fuk alleged they had borrowed money from him several months ago.

Tsang Fuk said that he accompanied Milroy to the village because the latter wanted to see some girls, while Lo Lai-tong denied all knowledge of the offence.

After evidence by both parties, Mr. D. J. N. Anderson, the Magistrate, discharged Milroy, saying he would be given the benefit of the doubt.

NEW HEAD OF HAIR

When hair starts to fall out, it's a sure sign that it is being starved. But even when baldness seems rapidly approaching, there's no need to despair. For if the root is alive, Silvikrin will make it grow. Because Silvikrin is an exact reproduction of the food that Nature herself should be supplying the hair through the bloodstream.

Problem of hair-growth solved. Owing to a brilliant piece of research, the problem of hair-growth has now been solved. It was found that no less than fourteen different organic elements are needed by the hair. These fourteen he succeeded in putting up in Nature's exact proportions, in Silvikrin. Doctors to whom it was submitted for testing were enthusiastic. They proved that Silvikrin clears up dandruff, prevents hair falling, and, if the root is still alive, actually makes hair grow. Professor Poland, the dermatologist, was especially sweeping in his praise. (Read it in the booklet with every Silvikrin bottle.)

Look up your hair trouble in the table on the right—see what you need—get your Silvikrin to-day.

Silvikrin DOES GROW HAIR

WHAT YOU NEED
For dandruff—hair beginning to fall. To keep the scalp healthy, strengthen the hair and bring out its natural beauty. Ask for Silvikrin Lotion.
For severe dandruff, serious falling hair, bald patches. To restore new hair growth use the concentrated natural organic hair food. Ask for Pure Silvikrin.
From chemists and hairdressers.

Silvikrin DOES GROW HAIR

How Silvikrin works: The black substance "right on the spot" will cause the hair to grow again. It is a natural hair food.

Our Flying Gunboat

By William Gibbons

HALF boat and half aeroplane; a flying fish; a baby flying fortress with a speed of 70 m.p.h.; these were the exciting journalistic descriptions given by America to the vessel with which, it was said, Britain would defeat German sea raiders.

Not so long ago they were dismissed as optimistic crystal-gazing, but now I have seen for myself one of the new British Motor Torpedo Boats, and know that it is very similar to the American descriptions.

Two exaggerations should, however, be disposed of. The vessels craft normally designed around a gun.

Three 1,200 h.p. engines, each separately driving a propeller, generate the high speed and power necessary in action, and there are two auxiliary engines for cruising at 10 knots.

As I walked about this craft—and developed what seems to be a perpetual crouch—I was reminded of the interior of a submarine, for space is naturally very restricted. There is a cooking oven (a paraffin burner), but this, I gathered, is used solely for making tea and cocoa to be had with sandwiches when the crew are at sea.

"There's no time for cooking," explained Coxswain Harold Jenkins, of Burnt Oak. "All of us, with the exception of the engine-room staff and 'Sparks,' are on deck, often for a stretch of 16 hours."

"Our biggest problem is keeping dry. No matter what kind of clothing we have, it's a safe bet that before the night's out we'll be soaked to the skin. You'd understand why if you saw the spray churned up with the boat going at speed."

The crew has a nocturnal existence at sea. The hours of darkness give an M.T.B. that additional shroud of secrecy so essential for the excursions around the French, Belgian, and Dutch coasts that are part of their "offensive patrols."

Their greatest assets are in the speed, amazing manoeuvrability and staying power of their vessels. The hull on either side of the ship is recessed, so that when the torpedoes are fired they just miss the edge of the hull.

It is in these torpedo attacks that the speed and manoeuvrability of the M.T.B. are brought into fullest use. As soon as the torpedo is fired the boat can be swung round away from the track of the "fin fish" within a matter of mere feet.

There must be comfort for the crew in the knowledge that, with such a shallow draught, their own boat is immune from mines and torpedoes. They are able to navigate waters that most other craft could not approach without courting disaster.

BRITAIN WILL NEVER QUIT

ON September 7, 1940, at five o'clock in the afternoon, a fleet of German planes swept up the Thames Estuary to the East End of London. They showered incendiary bombs on the warehouses and the houses of dockland. Three and one-half hours later the heavy bombers came. The Blitzkrieg was on.

Not that this was Britain's first experience with German bombers. They had been coming over for months. Bombs had been dropped many times in the South and the Southeast of England, in Wales, in the Midlands, in Scotland. The attacks, however, had been spread out and sporadic. It was very obvious on the night of September 7, that the war had entered a new phase.

It was just at tea-time when the first planes arrived. They came in five waves. There must have been 500 of them altogether. The streets were jammed with throngs of Saturday afternoon shoppers. Men sat in the pubs enjoying their beer, grimy pipes, and an occasional game of darts. Children played wherever there was room for them to play. Four thousand people were watching a football game in one field and, at another nearby, 6,000 about a greyhound track. Nobody paid much attention to the siren. It had gone many times before and, as before, undoubtedly would be followed by the All Clear in a little while.

It wasn't. This raid soon took on a character different from the others.

There was no fooling now. This was the real thing. People who had been rapping in the street took cover. Women hustled their children off to the nearest shelters. Bomb after bomb fell. Planes came in from all directions. The bombs fell on the greyhound track. People dived under the stands or lay down on their seats. Splinters flew in all directions. Women fainted. One bomb fell just behind the kennels. The dogs were frightened but unharmed. One of the kennel dogs was blown open and a dog escaped into the paddock.

Two raiders attacked a train. They dived down to a height of about sixty feet and then raked the train with machine-gun fire. The train continued its journey. Meanwhile, English planes had arrived to give battle. They sailed into the enemy formations, scattering them, pouring lead into them, driving them off. People cheered in the streets as the first Nazi bomber crashed to earth. A cloud of black smoke rose. Several planes were seen to be hit by bursting shells. A Nazi came screaming to earth with a noise like that of an automobile with faulty brakes sliding down a mountain.

The Germans lost 103 planes altogether, about one in five of those which came over. The R.A.F. was reported to have lost twenty-two planes.

It was a good day for the R.A.F. Unfortunately, it was a bad day for London. The raiders had succeeded in starting numerous fires among the warehouses, elevators and oil storage tanks of the East End. These fires spread rapidly and merged into an inferno. One fire was a mile long. The sky over London became a vast pool of light. The Germans had lost heavily in both machines and men. They had done little human damage in their tea-time raid. They had, however, achieved their principal objective. They had set London on fire. This city, which for twelve months had been hiding in the black-out, was now a gigantic beacon. German bombers waited in the fields of North France as soon as it was dark, they returned to the attack. The Nazis now had it all their own way. It required no navigation to find London. The flames must have been visible for a hundred miles. The Nazis had only to point the noses of their machines toward the light, come in over the swirling smoke and drop their bombs.

Several of the oil tanks along the Thames went up. Warehouses filled with valuable stores, including food, were destroyed. The Rotherhithe docks caught a fire. The river turned into a stream of molten metal, red and sluggish. The town began to look, at one and the same time, like something out of the Dark Ages and those pictures of the next war so often depicted by H.G. Wells. The sky turned pink, then red, then white. The noise rose and fell as though controlled by a giant rheostat. The glow spread down the river and then westward to engulf the whole city. A strong breeze sprang up. The civil defence workers kept the fire at bay. This city, which had survived three great catastrophes, was to surmount yet another.

Full 500 planes took part in the afternoon raid. There is no way of knowing how many came over during the eight terrible hours of the night raid. The chances are that there were at least 300, perhaps another 500. The Nazis dropped, altogether, about 2,000,000 pounds of bombs, one of the most ferocious assaults in the history of warfare, and probably the most devastating ever made upon a civilian population.

It was no accident that the first blow of the blitzkrieg fell on the people of London's East End. Hitler always has shown an uncanny ability for combining the military, diplomatic and political aspects of an attack.

It had long been bruited about the capitals of Europe that, when the Germans moved against Britain, they would strike first at the poorer areas, in the hope of driving a wedge between the workers and the government.

Britain had little protection against the sort of punishment that the German air force could dish out. The Nazis knew this, and intelligent people among the British also knew it. Hitler probably reasoned that the workers were the weak spot in British society and that, if he could break their morale, the war would be won.

The R.A.F. had succeeded in holding the Nazis by day, to be sure, but the people were in for a rude awakening with regard to night raids. Hitler undoubtedly thought, and with much justification, that the masses would feel they had been betrayed and would, therefore, rise in a fury and destroy the government.

Hitler was wrong. The people of London's East End took everything that the Germans had to offer. They took one of the most terrible beatings ever inflicted on a civilian population, and came back for more. David Low, the great English cartoonist, drew a picture of German bombs beating fruitlessly against the Cockney heart. It was a picture that told, in a few bold strokes, the whole story of the first days of the Blitzkrieg against Britain.

On the second night of the Blitzkrieg, the technique followed by the Germans was about the same as before. The planes flew high, came in singly or in pairs, and seemed to drop their bombs more or less indiscriminately. Casualties were about the same—286 killed, 1,400 seriously injured.

This was to be the pattern of life in London, night after night, through the beautiful months of September and October, and so into the winter. The planes came on dark nights and on nights of brilliant moonlight, in good weather and bad, on still dry nights and on nights of wind and rain. Bad weather, plus changing tactics, eventually caused some slackening off but, from September 7 to the moment when these lines are written, the citizens of London have enjoyed only a few nights free from the menace of bombs.

When the Germans saw that the people of the East End had not panicked and, apparently, were not going to panic, they turned their attention to another part of the capital. The next place they went after was the section known as the City, which is the financial and mercantile district. Some damage was caused here, but the loss of life was not large since, although a million people come into the City during the day-time, only a few thousand spend the night there.

By

The Germans then went into the West End. Here they could get both property and people, and what is more, they could get people who would influence the policy of the government. Several nights in a row the West End got a thorough pasting. Bombs fell in Park Lane, in Berkeley Square, in Bond Street, Piccadilly and Oxford Street. Exclusive shops were wrecked. Several theatres were destroyed, and one of the largest department stores was burned out.

One of my friends, an American army officer, was worried about this development.

"Now they are getting at the weak spot," he said. "The workers can take it. I am a bit worried about the shopkeepers."

It appeared that the shopkeepers also could take it, and Goering's bombers moved on. They went after Hampstead, Pancras, Marylebone, St. John's, Knightsbridge, Kensington, Chelsea. The suburbs to the south and southwest came in for a special beating. The destruction in Croydon, which had an attack of its own long before the Blitz started, was terrific. Streatham, Battersea and a score of other communities also came in for attention.

Gradually, the tide of destruction spread over the entire city. Three times the raiders scored hits on Buckingham Palace. It is rumoured that Hitler, at the beginning of the war, suggested through a neutral government that the heads of state should be spared. This suggestion reportedly was spurned by the English. Be that as it may, the Germans were very foolish in bombing Buckingham Palace. It gave the fishwives of the East End and the queen an affinity which could not possibly have been achieved otherwise.

The Germans must have recognized their mistake, for they lost no time in claiming that the bombs which hit the palace were really intended for some oil tanks nearby. There are, of course, no oil tanks within miles of Buckingham Palace. The German claim brought an amusing retort in a letter to "The Times" from a man who signed himself C. Paley Scott.

"Sir," said Mr. Scott, "we all agree that only military objectives should be attacked, but now that Germany has attacked the oil tanks near Buckingham Palace, is it not time we bombed the submarine base at Bresthaven?"

London carried on. The people kept going. They put out the fires, cleaned up the debris. They patched up the public services, kept the highways open and the trains running. They helped each other. They took care of the injured and succored the homeless. Women tore up their underclothing in the streets for bandages. They fought disease. They buried their dead. They sent their children to the country, and the women fed each other's men.

Above all, the people of London—add of other cities, too—kept cheerful. They kept their chin up and their thumbs up. They fought back. They took it. They fired guns to drown the noise of bombs. When that did not work, they put plugs in their ears. They did not panic. They stayed put. They trusted Churchill and, if this war is ever won by anybody, no one will be entitled to a greater share of the credit than these front-line fighters in the Battle of Britain.

In evaluating the resistance of the people of Great Britain, we should also bear in mind the fact that the air danger was not the only one with which they had to contend. The great menace, of course, and the one which the air attacks undoubtedly were a prelude, was the possibility of invasion. There is no doubt that the Nazis intended—and probably still intend—to invade the British Isles.

Meanwhile, the British have had to maintain their position in the Orient, keep shipping routes open all over the world and fight in Africa. They have stood fast at Singapore, Gibraltar and Suez.

If ever a country was at bay, England has been at bay during the past few months; and if ever a country has given an exhibition of how to fight back in the face of almost insurmountable obstacles, that country is Britain.

When the Blitzkrieg began, London was to share the fate of Madrid, Barcelona, Warsaw and Rotterdam.

It turned out that London was to suffer more than any of the others; she was, in fact, to endure the greatest assault inflicted on any city with the possible exception of Chungking—in modern times. Her citizens were to be killed and maimed by thousands. Her streets were to become a shambles. Hospitals, schools and museums were to be destroyed. All those things, and many more, were to come to pass in this ancient city which, for 1,900 years, has sprawled in the valley of the Thames. Yet, London was to endure.

And will endure. The British will never yield this city. They may yield a pile of ashes, a hole in the ground, but they will never surrender London. The "scorched earth" left behind by retreating Communists in China will look like an oasis compared to what the Nazis will find if they ever get to London.

The English will fight on to the last man and the last stone. They'll never quit.

312 PARTICIPATE IN THE OPENING OF THE 1941 LAWN BOWLS LEAGUE

Bob Duncan Records Only Seven Of Afternoon RECREIO BEAT CRAIGENGOWER BY ONE SHOT

THREE HUNDRED AND TWELVE PLAYERS TOOK PART IN THE OPENING OF THE 1941 LAWN BOWLS LEAGUE SEASON YESTERDAY IN BRIGHT SUNSHINE BUT ON SLOWISH GREENS AS THE RESULT OF THE DOWNPOUR OVERNIGHT.

Main match of the day was at Club de Recreio, where the champions were at home to Craigengower, age-old rivals. Result was a win for the home team by one shot, despite the fact U. M. Omar was the only Craigengower skip to win. Recreio thus started the season with four points, two for two rink wins and two for an aggregate win.

No Club registered a clean sweep, and only one seven was recorded, by Bob Duncan of K.B.G.C. "B," who, however, lost by 2 shots. Sixes were returned by T. A. Madar (K.C.C.) in First Division, J. L. Stephens and A. J. Kew of Kowloon Tong and A. J. Jillett (Prison Officers) in Second Division and H. Nish (K.B.G.C.) in Third Division. All these players won their matches except Stephens, who was held to a tie.

FOUR SKIPS WERE RESPONSIBLE FOR THEIR TEAM WINNING, DESPITE BEING DOWN ON THE OTHER TWO RINKS. THEY WERE J. F. MCGOWAN OF CIVIL SERVICE IN FIRST DIVISION, A. J. KREW OF KOWLOON TONG IN SECOND DIVISION AND M. F. ALARCON (H.K.F.C.) IN THIRD DIVISION.

C. Gowland's 34 was the highest rink aggregate, while the 21-

McGowan's win by 9 shots decided the match. Down 6-4 at the 6th, he scored 3 1 3 for an 11-6 lead at the 9th. At the 14th, however, he was only 12-11 ahead, but 1 1 1 1 4 0 gave him a comfortable win. He scored at 11 ends.

Shaw was 13-7 down at the 11th, but then scored 3 3 0 1 0 2, only to be level at 16-all at the 17th. Fraser then chalked up a brace of twos, only to concede two twos at the last two ends for a tie. Fraser scored at 11 ends.

Rakusen opened with a four and then conceded a six to Madar, who was 13-12 down at the 12th and 19-all at the 14th as the result of a four by Rakusen. Commencing the last end 21-19 down, Rakusen scored a single, Madar scored at 10 ends.

At Happy Valley, Civil Service Cricket Club drew with Kowloon Cricket Club on rinks but won on aggregate for a 3½ points to 1½ win in First Division.

"C.G." Fights Back

At King's Park, Recreio "A" beat Craigengower Cricket Club by 2 rinks to 1 and on aggregate (4 pts. to 1) in First Division. Luz had a ding-dong struggle with Bradbury and scored at 11 ends to Bradbury's nine, one end being dead. Led 9-5 at the 9th, Luz scored 2 1 1 2 for a 12-9 lead at the 14th, but he was only one shot ahead at the 18th. A five then made the game almost safe, and Bradbury reduced the deficit with 3 and 2 at the last two ends.

Omar was only two shots to the good at the 13th, but 2 1 4 1 took him to 10-8. Six then scored a couple of singletons and a three to lose 13-19. There was also a dead end in this match. Omar winning at 11 ends.

CHINESE CHARITY SOCCER MATCH ENDS IN DRAW

ENGINEERS DEFEAT CANADIANS

Royal Engineers beat Canadian Baseball team by 5 runs to 3 in a friendly baseball game at Caroline Hill yesterday.

Royal Engineers gave a fairly good display and showed a decided improvement on last year's form. Sarsfield pitched the whole game for them and, though he did not strike out many, showed promise.

Sappers registered only two hits against five and scored their runs through their opponents' errors.

Outstanding features of the game were Fisher's two-bagger in the first inning and Tomeshevsky's three-base hit in the fourth.

Following were the teams:—
Canadians:—Futuroff, Fisher, Oliver, Baker, Tomeshevsky, Pullen, Blas, Lim and Smith.

R.E.:—Taylor, Shaw, Foley, Fox, Heath, Sarsfield, Ratcliffe, Wellford, Gough, Day and Clark.

POOR STANDARD REVEALED

Little good football was witnessed at Caroline Hill yesterday when East China and South China met in a charity game in aid of funds for a scholarship at Chinese University in memory of the late Chen Chen-wo, popularly known as "Darky Chen, the All-China footballer who was killed on active service."

The game resulted in a 2-2 draw, but it was obvious that neither team were exerting themselves. Hsu King-seng, East China pivot, was the only player who tried to live up to the game and he was quite the most outstanding player of the afternoon.

Chen Tak-fai played his first game after his recent arm injury, but he was unable to do much against Hsu King-seng.

Neither goalkeeper had much to do in the early stages of the game, but both brought off good saves in the closing minutes. Tsang Tung had a hot drive from Lee Wai-long for a corner and at the other end Cheong Wing-choy brought off two good saves.

The East China forward line did not show any combination. Lee Wai-long in the centre-forward berth not being given much of the ball, while the other forwards were too inclined to be individualistic.

Tsao, on the right-wing, was, however, well fed but sent over few good centres.

East China took the lead in the first half through Hyul, who sent in a hard shot which went in off the upright, and they maintained this lead till the interval. South China equalised from a penalty taken by Fung King-cheong for "hands" against Hsu King-seng, and took the lead shortly after through Kwok Ying-kee. Lee Shek-yau placed East China on level terms when he sent in a hard drive which also hit the upright before entering the goal.

HOPE'S DASHED
PATTERSON in those days, as ever, had a reputation for inconsistency and when he served a very ordinary loss to Kong's force, hand which the latter was able to crack past him for an easy point and followed this up with another winner off another tame service to his backhand, Kong began to have ideas about taking a set or two.

He quickly learned, however, that this was not one of the Australian's off-days. The next service he did not see, in fact he did not get near four in succession and any idea Kong may have had of carving a niche for himself in the Hall of Fame quickly dissipated.

Beautifully built and muscled like a prize-fighter, Patterson did not play too strenuously thereafter.

PAUL KONG PLAYED FOR CHINA IN TWO DAVIS CUP MATCHES

By "Adrem"

One of the most widely-travelled lawn tennis players in the Colony, Paul Kong, Chinese Recreation Club veteran, made the headlines last week by beating Tsui Wai-pui, former Colony singles and doubles champion and China's representative in the Davis Cup, in the C.R.C. singles championship.

KONG is an interesting personality and when on any subject, be it tennis, swimming, business or music, he holds his listener with his wide store of reminiscences and experiences in the many parts of the world he has visited in the course of a colourful career.

The son of an Episcopal preacher, Kong first saw the light of day in Honolulu and, like all residents of those balmy isles, his big interest in his early days was in swimming and later American football, which he played at the University of Hawaii and in the Students Army Training Corps when training for a commission in the last world war.

It was not until he was sent to the United States to finish his education that he first played tennis in 1917. A student at Columbia University in New York City, he visited Forest Hills during a holiday and saw Big Bill Tilden in action, and his dynamic personality so captured Kong's imagination that he determined to make good at the game himself.

There was many long hours of practice against the wall of the huge gym at Columbia with a newly-acquired racket and a constant study of the latest book on how to play lawn tennis.

IN VARSITY SIDE
IN 1923 Kong had made such strides that he reached the semi-final of the King's County, Brooklyn, Tournament, in which 120 players took part. He was then beaten by a man named Kynaston, who was considered one of the most promising players in the country, and on the strength of that showing was given a place in the University team, which, with such players as Lang and Anderson, was highly rated in Collegiate circles.

Indeed Columbia that season met with outstanding success, beating, successively, Harvard, Yale, Princeton, University of Southern California and New York University.

Only defeat inflicted on them was by the West Side Tennis Club, whose membership boasted such names as F. T. Hunter, Harada, Vincent Richards, Fukuda, the Japanese champion, Watson M. Shuburn and Cedric Major. This club is situated at Forest Hills, and it is on their courts that many historic international matches have been played.

DAVIS CUP
IN 1924 Kong, then in his fourth year of tennis, was surprised to receive an invitation to represent China in a Davis Cup match against Australia. Although he felt that his standard was not up to international competition, he accepted with alacrity and in due course travelled to Crescent Athletic Club, Brooklyn, where the Chinese team, which consisted of Wei Wing-lok and C. K. Huang, both of them now dead, and himself, were introduced to Gerald Patterson, O'Hara Wood, Fred Kohn and R. Schlesinger of the Australian party.

The two teams had dinner together on the night before the match and Kong was very impressed with the friendliness and encouragement given him by Patterson.

In consequence, therefore, when he learned the following morning that he had to play a single against Patterson, he did not have the feeling, as he most certainly would have done had he not already met Patterson, that he was being pitted against a superman.

IN SHANGHAI

FINISHING at Columbia University in 1924, Kong went home to Honolulu but only stayed for a few months as he left for Shanghai towards the end of the year. In 1926 he entered the final of the Shanghai singles championship but lost to John Wade 7-5, 6-4, 7-5.

In 1927 Kong was a member of the Chinese team which won the tennis championship at the Far East Olympiad, this being their first and only success. The Chinese team was Ng Sze-kwang, the late Khoo Hooi-hye, Kong and Gordon Lum, the last two playing in all the matches.

SECOND CUP MATCH
IN 1928 Kong returned to America for his second Davis Cup series, in company with Gordon Lum. On this occasion they were drawn against United States, the match being played at Rock Hill Tennis Club, Kansas City. The match had been well advertised and a huge crowd attended.

Again Kong lost both his singles matches, going down to Hennessey 6-1, 6-2, 6-1 and to Lott 6-1, 6-1, 6-1. In the doubles Kong was given the thrill of his life when he played against Tilden and Coen, the latter a protégé of Big Bill. It was an enjoyable encounter which the Americans won 6-4, 6-3, 7-5, but, says Kong, the winners never really exerted themselves.

INTERPORT MATCH
RETURNING to Shanghai in 1929, Kong played in his first interport match against Hong Kong, which the Colony, represented by M. W. Lo, S. A. Runjahn and T. Honda, won 3-2. Kong played Honda and lost 6-4, 6-4, 6-4.

In 1930 Kong reached the semi-final of the Shanghai championship before being beaten by the Japanese Tawara, a terrific hitter, who, at Forest Hills in the Davis Cup competition in 1936 had led Cochet by two sets, 5-3 and 30-love on service only for the Frenchman to stage one of his spectacular rallies and win. If Tawara had won this match Japan would have met United States in the Challenge Round as Harada beat both Cochet and Lacoste.

IN HONG KONG
THE same year Kong, with Lee Wai-long as his partner, won the Shanghai hardcourt doubles and, representing China in the Rotary Cup competition, with Khoo Hooi-hye, registered the first of four consecutive successes for China with the same two men carrying their colours throughout.

Kong's next big match was the return Interport engagement with Hong Kong, which was played in Shanghai. On that occasion Shanghai won 5-0, Kong beating Ho Ka-lau and, with Khoo, Ho and Yew Man-kit. Other members of the Colony side were M. W. Lo and E. C. Fincher.

HEAVY BATTLE IN IRAQ

R.A.F. Bombs Artillery Positions: Oil Wells Seized?

Besieged Force Makes Sorties

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

THE CLASH BETWEEN BRITISH AND IRAQI FORCES AROUND HABBANIYAH, THE HUGE R.A.F. AIR BASE, HAS DEVELOPED INTO A HEAVY BATTLE, WITH THE IRAQI FORCES BRINGING ARTILLERY INTO ACTION.

Iraq is reported to be mobilising more troops and (according to an Italian report) troops landed at Basra have been encircled by Iraqi forces while Iraq is reported to have seized control of the vital Mosul oilfields.

RASHID ALI'S CLAIMS

An official communique issued by the Rashid Ali Government in Baghdad, as reported by the official Italian news agency, claims that an attempt by British motorised troops to seize a desert aerodrome and post at Rutbah, in Iraq, was repulsed.

Rutbah is opposite the Syrian Desert, some 220 miles east of Baghdad, and is an important post on the air and land route from Palestine to Iraq.

Advices reaching London from Jerusalem state that Arabs in Palestine have heard with surprise broadcasts emanating from a station purporting to be Baghdad.

This station is broadcasting a highly coloured account of the military situation in Iraq and also some vivid accounts of alleged disturbances in Palestine.

Since people in Palestine are aware there have been no such disturbances, they are receiving the news broadcast by this station with amusement and incredulity. —Reuter.

The "Express" says these troops can easily be reinforced from the Aegean and Greece. Meanwhile it is reported that British women and children moved to Habbaniyah have been evacuated to Palestine.

In Jerusalem, the executive Jewish Council has called on all unmarried men between the ages of 20 and 30 to enlist in the British Army immediately. —International News Service.

Heralding the advent of the war to the Near East, the Iraq attack on Habbaniyah is an attempt to force a British withdrawal from Iraq.

British women and children evacuated from Baghdad, the Iraqi capital, are huddled in Habbaniyah under shell fire. Supported by R.A.F. planes, the besieged British troops have made a series of sorties.

All Day Fighting

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD") Heavy fighting continued round Habbaniyah all day though few details so far have been received in London.

Informed quarters in London see the possibility of a fully fledged war for control of the Mesopotamia oilfields.

The appeal of Rashid Ali for German help was followed a few hours later by wild rumours that German troops were filtering into French-mandated Syria.

The "Daily Express" says German infiltration into Syria threatens Iraq and the British troops in Palestine.

News reaching London suggests that the number of German troops in Syria is higher than generally thought.

The "Express" says these troops can easily be reinforced from the Aegean and Greece. Meanwhile it is reported that British women and children moved to Habbaniyah have been evacuated to Palestine.

AMERICANS RETAIN INFLUENCE IN FRANCE

THE AMERICANS HAVE RETAINED THEIR INFLUENCE IN VICHY, DECLARES THE CORRESPONDENT OF THE "BASLER NACHRICHTEN."

Even pro-German French publicists consider that of the two admirals resident in Vichy, Admiral Darlan is less powerful than Admiral Leahy, the U.S. Ambassador.

SYRIA PETROL BLAST

A violent explosion caused considerable damage to a petrol refinery that the French mandatory authorities set up some months ago at Tripoli (Syria), says the Jerusalem correspondent of the Free French Agency.

The refinery was intended to deal with new petroleum stored in reservoirs at Tripoli, terminus of the pipeline from Kirkuk, in Iraq, and thus remedy the lack of petrol in Syria.

A great part of the refinery was destroyed before flames, aided by soldiers, succeeded in mastering the flames. The circumstances in which the explosion took place have given rise to talk of sabotage, the correspondent adds. —Reuter.

RICE MONOPOLY BY GOVERNMENT

AND EXPORTS AT THE EXPIRATION, ON THE 31ST MAY, 1941, OF THE CURRENT LICENSING IMPORTATION SCHEME SET UP UNDER THE ESSENTIAL COMMODITIES RESERVES ORDINANCE OF 1936, THE MONOPOLY IS TO BE A WAR TIME MEASURE ONLY, BUT ITS CONTINUANCE FOR SOME TIME AFTER THE CONCLUSION OF HOSTILITIES MAY PROVE NECESSARY.

Thailand Shortage

Due to the comparative shortage in the last rice crop in Thailand, the exportable surplus of which dropped to 80% of the previous year's crop, and the uncertainty of obtaining regular rice supplies from other sources, increasing reliance on Burma is necessitated for the supply of the domestic requirements of Hong Kong and its entente trade, and as a consequence, the local consumer who, in the past, has largely favoured Thailand rice, will now have no option but to consume more of the Burma product.

CRISIS IN WAR TO FACE

Dunkirk had come to be regarded as the greatest combined evacuation operation in the history of warfare but in Greece the Navy had to go in and take out, almost without any protection against dive-bombers, 45,000 men, said the First Lord of the Admiralty, Mr. A. V. Alexander, in a speech yesterday.

"I regard it as almost a miracle that in this last evacuation we lost only two destroyers," he said.

Britain was now facing the early days of the most critical period of the war, he continued, and had to meet new problems in the Atlantic and the Mediterranean, and even in the Persian Gulf.

Faith in the ultimate result was strengthened by the resources of the growing arsenal in the United States, and he seemed to see signs they were coming near the time when, if necessary, the United States would throw the whole of her weight into the struggle. There was solid ground for faith. —Reuter.

MASS RAID ON CHUNGKING

(SPECIAL TO "SUNDAY HERALD")

Much damage was done in a massive air raid on Chungking yesterday by over 40 bombers escorted by a similar number of fighters.

Captain James Roosevelt had boarded a plane for Rangoon an hour before the Japanese raiders appeared over Chungking.

Hundreds of high explosive and incendiary bombs were showered, some of which fell in the residential areas of foreigners.

No foreign casualties, however, have been reported. —Our Own Correspondent.

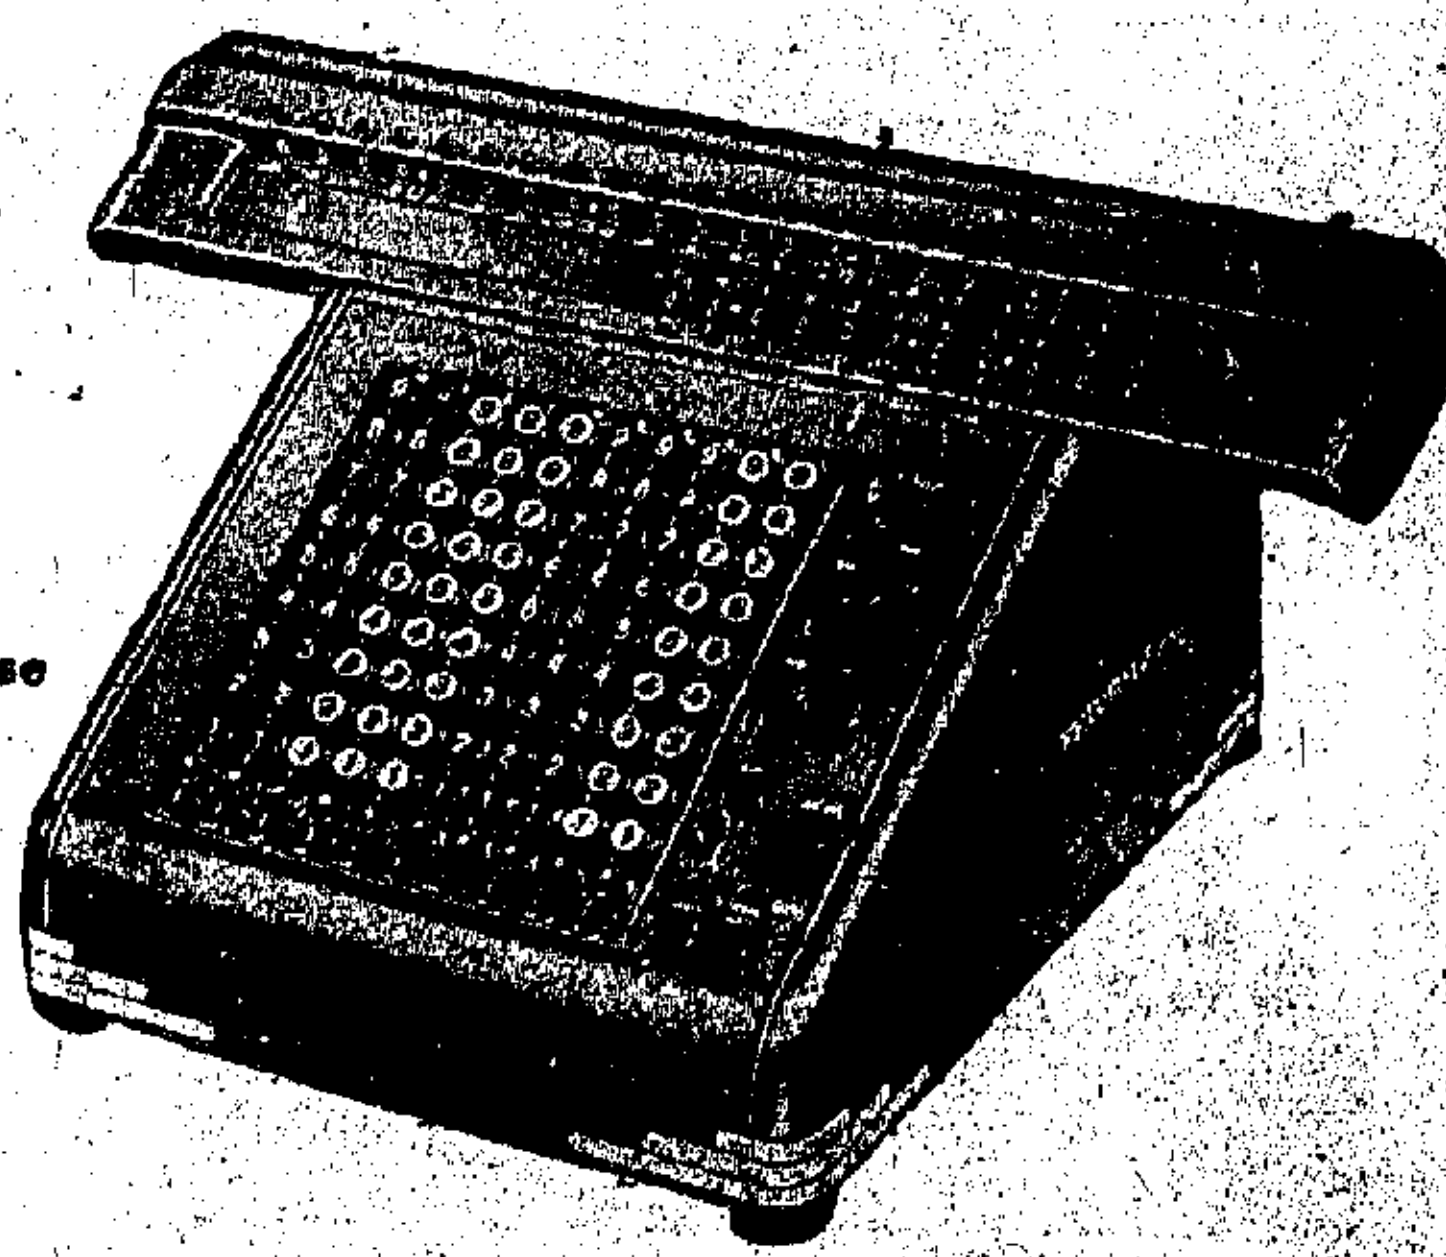

The Japanese aircraft, in spread eagle formation, rained bombs across the city without interference from Chinese fighters, which did not appear though anti-aircraft fire was very heavy.

The western suburbs were particularly heavily bombed. Several fires were started but all were quickly controlled. —Reuter.

HOLLYWOOD

FASHION PRE-VIEW

Hollywood designers have made up Cinderella styles to fit your dreams.

THAT mood is here again, the one named Spring, and you no doubt are in a quandary about your wardrobe. What you want to know, are "they" wearing?

Suits, everyone agrees, are a must. Lucille Ball practically lives in suits both in private life and in her new picture, "RKO Radio's A Girl, A Guy and a Goo." All of these suits are cut straight as a die from shoulder to hip or even lower. The line is continued in the straight skirts. One of Lucille's pets is a smooth-tweed of French blue with navy and a fleck of red. The saucer-brim of the hat that accompanies this is faced with the suit tweed.

Dorothy Conningore, who plays the feminine lead in the Orson Welles production "Citizen Kane," has an ensemble of green wool with a very long slim jacket. (Incidentally, long bodice lines are right for every type of dress.) This particular jacket is single-breasted but with two rows of buttons down the centre front. The skirt is straight with a double box pleat. Also new this season are thick hand-knitted jackets. Ginger Rogers wears one in navy blue wool.

with a double row of brass buttons. She uses it over a lighter blue frock.

Important is the smooth shoulder line. Often the sleeves are cut in one piece with the bodice. In "RKO Radio's Spirit in Pain," Linda Haynes wears a suit in which the pocket sleeves are one with the back but have the conventional sleeve seam in front. This suit has a deep shoulder yoke and sleeves of light blue; the body of the jacket and the skirt are a darker blue.

By the way, the smartest new ensembles will combine two colours, often in violent contrast. Desert green and magenta are teamed in one ensemble for Margaret O'Hara in "RKO Radio's" forthcoming picture "They Met in Argentina." Favourite colours this spring are all the odd greens, browns, and brown-beige shading into off-white.

Prints are better than ever. For evening they glitter with sequins. Cottons are going full blast from early morn till the nightcap hour, especially when printed in South American, Mexican or East Indian designs. Wendy Barrie has a peasant frock made entirely of paisley handkerchiefs. Still with us are the bare mid-riffs, bra and shorts for swimming, brief sweaters with slacks for casual wear.

The white summer suit designed by Edith Head, is alone worth a ticket for Paramount's "The Lady Eve." Barbara Stanwyck models it for you. Very simple in design, the jacket is bloused at the waistline, fitted over the hips and closes with a simple necktie. The skirt falls straight. What distinguishes the suit is the wide, wide black piping at the throat, Barbara dons a black felt coat with a wide black collar and a wide black belt. The skirt is straight with a double box pleat. Beaded embroidery, in a delicate floral design, garnishes the bodice and sleeves of this Patricia Perkins dress modeled by Margaret Lindsay, appearing next in Columbia's "Every Queen Master Detective." The skirt is slim in line and gathered to slight fullness and clinging white crepe is the fabric.

Look to the South Seas, Hawaii and South America for your fashion future, say the Columbia Pictures designers. They emphasize huge flower prints, leis and sarongs and such brilliant colour combinations as green, yellow and red.

Three sisters give us plenty of advance models for the teen age girls in Universal's romantic comedy "Nice Girls." Anne Gwynne, as the oldest daughter, insists on her rights to wear more sophisticated clothes than Deanna Durbin, who goes charmingly romantic, while little sister Ann Gillis thrills over a first party dress of aqua dotted swiss with eyelet embroidery.

Designer Dolly Tree of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer believes in simplicity of design for spring; a line of colour, gray, short, fairly straight skirts, round and high waisted, and dinner gowns with tiny little jackets.

If you suddenly fell heir to a million dollars, what would you do? Buy yourself a heap of clothes, that's what. That's what Cinderella's Patricia Lane does in Warner Brothers' "Miss Wheelwright Discovers America." Her clothes are designed by Orry-Kelly and are definitely something to dream about.

In Warner Brothers' "The Great Lie," with a modern Bette Davis, the clothes are perfectly timed for spring. Since many of the scenes take place on a Southern plantation, Bette wears a collection of good-looking sport clothes including a new version of her favourite shirtmaker.

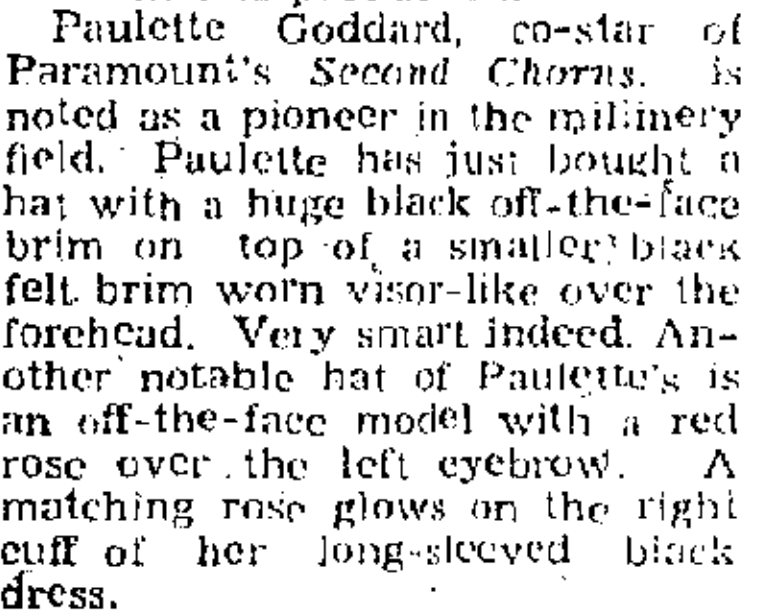

A little trick goes a long way to smarten one's appearance. Here are a few suggestions for you: Wear a clip on your short glove if your dress has three-quarter length sleeves; take two dark handkerchiefs and in white embroidery one with your first initial, the other with your last initial, and tuck these in the breast pockets of your suit or spring coat. If you have a bit of real lace, you are in luck. Make a rosette of this and stick it in your lapel with a brilliant pin, or clip on a handkerchief with the lace-trimmed edges falling in a cascade. A lace bow for your hair is another idea. Any old trunks in your attic? Better look.

Three sizes: Deluxe, Large, Popular. For harmonising loveliness use Michel Rouge for the cheeks, Michel Cosmétique for the eyelashes, and Michel Face Powder.

Banish Those Wrinkles

By Patricia Lindsay

If we could see ourselves as others see us we most certainly would correct some of our facial expressions! Without realising it we invite again wrinkles by squinting, frowning, showing anger, feeling sorry for ourselves and in other ways.

If you have a couple of mirrors around look into them frequently when you are not intending to fuss with your face. Try catching your normal expressions as you go about your work or recreation. You'll find yourself straining to see something in a poor light or without your glasses. You'll catch yourself frowning as you concentrate on the bills of the month or a disturbing letter. Or perhaps you indulge in self-pity and that, my dears, causes your mouth to droop, wrinkles to appear in your forehead and around your eyes.

One of the best beauty habits a woman can adopt is to lift her face muscles frequently by smiling. Smile when you are alone. Smile when others are around. Watch yourself in the mirror as you smile. Note how wrinkles dim and your eyes take on a pretty expression. Your face looks several years younger.

The best thing you can do for wrinkles is to prevent them from forming! For once they do appear they quickly deepen and it takes a lot of treatment to make them disappear.

Keep your skin nicely lubricated and if it is very dry use a wrinkle cream at night before going to bed. But don't just pat it on your skin and hope for miracles. Massage it well. Palm your forehead from the centre out keeping your eyes closed. For eye wrinkles use your two first fingers and rub firmly from nose out and upward. It takes a circular massage with the first three fingers and a rich cream to smooth out mouth lines. It takes more than that—the smiling expression I mentioned above and an uplifting masque treatment at least once a week. A chin band worn at night or for an hour or two, during the day also helps to keep the face muscles firm and lifted. Any sagging muscles will cause a crop of wrinkles—so keep your face muscles lifted!

Frequent splashing with warm water followed by cold tends to tone the skin and muscles by stimulating the flow of blood to the face. Chill the water with ice if it does not run cold from the tap. You see the warm water opens the pores and the cold splashing closes them. By alternating them you are forcing the pores to exercise.

Always protect your skin from the elements by wearing a foundation cream or lotion when you go out in the open. Wind and hippy weather dries your skin as quickly as the sun.

If you follow these precautions you can keep your face free of extra lines and wrinkles. A few are necessary for expression you know—those are the normal ones.

A BED-TIME STORY FOR CHILDREN:—Uncle Wiggily Sits Down

By Howard R. Garis

Rangi, the big woodland caribou, stood outside Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow. He looked at the rabbit gentleman. Uncle Wiggily was looking in the open door of his bungalow.

A moment before his wife had stood there, also Nurse Jane. But after Mr. Longears had told the lady animals about the useful friend he had brought home, they both disappeared. I mean Mrs. Longears disappeared and Nurse Jane also vanished.

But Uncle Wiggily stood there in the door. And the caribou stood outside. He shook his big head with the big, branching horns. He stood in the snow with his big hooves. They were so large they made big holes in the snow.

Then Rangi shook his big neck, with its thick fringe of white hair. Except for the hair on his feet and neck, which was white, Rangi was a sort of brown colour. There was a little patch of white on the under side of his tail. It was by grabbing hold of this tail that Uncle Wiggily had managed to get up on Rangi's back for a ride to the bungalow.

"Is anything the matter, Uncle Wiggily?" asked Rangi.

"Something must be the matter," said Mr. Longears. "I never knew my wife and Nurse Jane to vanish and disappear so oddly before when I brought friends home to dinner. Especially such a useful friend as you are going to be, Rangi."

"I hope I can make myself useful," said the big caribou.

"Of course you can!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily. "You have no idea how many things get thrown around in our bungalow."

"Who throws them around?" asked the caribou.

"My rabbit children," said Mr. Longears. "I have about forty 'teen sixteen little rabbit children."

"That is a large number," said Rangi.

"Oh, well, we are happy," laughed Uncle Wiggily. "But still I do not understand why my wife and Nurse Jane disappeared so quickly when I brought you home."

"Perhaps they do not want me," said Rangi sadly.

"Has he - has he gone?"

"Oh, that cannot be!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily. "They always welcome my friends. But if you will excuse me, I will go see what is the matter."

"Please do," said the caribou. "I will stay out here and browse on some moss I may be able to dig out from beneath the snow. Don't hurry on my account, Uncle Wiggily."

Mr. Longears hurried into his bungalow. He found Nurse Jane sitting in a chair in the kitchen. Her apron over her head, Mrs. Longears was peering out of a closet. Her eyes were closed.

"Has he - has he gone, Wiggily?" asked the lady rabbit.

"Has who gone, my dear?"

"That enormous creature—that ancient Irish elk—that giant who chased you home! Oh, he must be a Bad Chap! You were lucky to get safely home!"

"Nothing of the sort, my dear," said Mr. Longears. "Rangi isn't so very big. And he is a caribou, not an Irish elk. He is coming to live here with us. He will help Nurse Jane pick up things the children throw around the bungalow. He will be a useful friend."

"Wiggily!" exclaimed Mrs. Longears. "Tell me this, Nurse Jane, how is it that the big caribou got in our little bungalow? Tell me that!"

Uncle Wiggily was so surprised that he sat down hard upon the floor, and if the traffic light will not an Irish elk. He is coming to live here with us. He will help Nurse Jane pick up things the children throw around the bungalow. He will be a useful friend."

The lady rabbit looked at him. "You are a caribou, not an Irish elk. He is coming to live here with us. He will help Nurse Jane pick up things the children throw around the bungalow. He will be a useful friend."

His coat and vest. These are designed as nearly as possible to check ventilation and inhibit action. The vest is a lovely garment with a false front, is buttoned tightly round the torso. The coat, even when provided with what is laughingly known as an action-back, is so stiffly built up with stout tweed shoulder padding and heavy lining, that a man can't even cut bread for his hostess at a party without first removing his coat. The massive shoulder structure is, of course, sheer vanity and doesn't fool anyone.

To be sure, his suit is lavishly provided with pockets. But instead of simplifying things, this merely leads to further complications. A man trying to discover in a hurry his house key, his driver's licence, or his best friend's wedding ring in any one of 12 pockets is just a scene of mass confusion.

His trousers. Trousers are funny, as every comedian from Charlie Chaplin down has recognised. They are still far from being a satisfactory garment. No one, after all, can be really comfortable when all his dignity as a human being hangs by suspender buttons.

His shoes. These weigh anywhere up to four pounds, and look large, confident and everlasting. Men value them because of their masculine appearance. If you try to tell them that they would actually be more comfortable in open sandals or a pair of really ventilated oxfords, they get indignant and say haughtily, what do you think they are, a female impersonator?

By way of contrast, observe the ease and simplicity and charm of women's clothes. We wear fitted sandals, silk stockings, and a simple one-piece garment that hangs dependably from our shoulders. We make use of every new industrial textile that comes off the looms.

We haven't a particle of false pride. If someone would invent corset cover, a nice attractive material made out of old newspapers, we would adopt it gladly and wear it till it was ready to be made back into newspapers again. We use latex to make our hats fit our heads, our shoes fit our feet, and our diaphragms fit over clothes. Thanks to women, the manufacture of rayon has become a major industry. And thanks to rayon, we are continuously well dressed, comfortable and freshly laundered.

Men reject these light practical materials on the ground that they won't hold their shape. Women wear clothes that are the same shape as themselves, and that will hold their shape as long as their waists do.

As for the men, you can't surprise them into radical changes, you have to sneak up on them quietly, taking away a button here, a pocket there, imperceptibly cutting down the starches in shirts and collar and cuffs.

Since the designers carried off successfully the minor victory of making shirt and collar into one piece, they should feel encouraged to try to add trousers to that combination, making a really convenient and practical one-piece garment. Then by slow, subtle propaganda, they might get rid of the vest.

After that it would probably be better to lay off for a couple of generations until men have become thoroughly accustomed to their new simplicity and freedom.

Of course, there is every possibility that none of these beautifully simple suggestions will ever be adopted. It is much more likely that the man of to-morrow will be dressed exactly like the man of yesterday and to-day, in wool coat, trousers and vest, starched shirt and collar, and a round felt hat, most of the year. And that every spring he will be getting his annual hearty laugh at the "funny little hats the women are wearing."

We don't mind. After all, we've earned the right to be silly about something. And we're not going to be too much disturbed by the critical opinion of a fellow-creature who is still wrapped up in wool and tied to his grandfather's galluses.

ALMOND LOAF

THIS delicious cake is crammed with crunchy toasted almonds inside and out! The unusual effect is really quite simple to produce. Hold the finely ground almonds are added to the batter and the other half pressed around the sides and bottom of the pan. When the cake is baked, it has an enchanting nutty coating as well as a nutty interior!

Almond Loaf

1 1/2 cups cake flour
1 1/2 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 cup shortening
2 egg whites
1/2 cup almond extract
1/2 tsp. lemon extract
1/2 cup sugar
2 cup egg whites
2 tbs. Gloria-milk
1 1/2 tbs. water, mixed
1 1/2 cups ground toasted blanched almonds

Sift flour, then measure. Resift with baking powder and salt. Cream shortening with flour until smooth and plastic. Add sugar a little at a time, and continue creaming until sugar granules disappear. Add unbeaten egg whites and continue beating until batter looks like soft marshmallow. Add dry ingredients alternately with milk, beginning and ending with dry ingredients. Add half of the almonds with last few surs. Coat sides and bottom of bread pan or small loaf cake pan with a mixture of half shortening and half flour. Press remaining almonds into this, then flour.

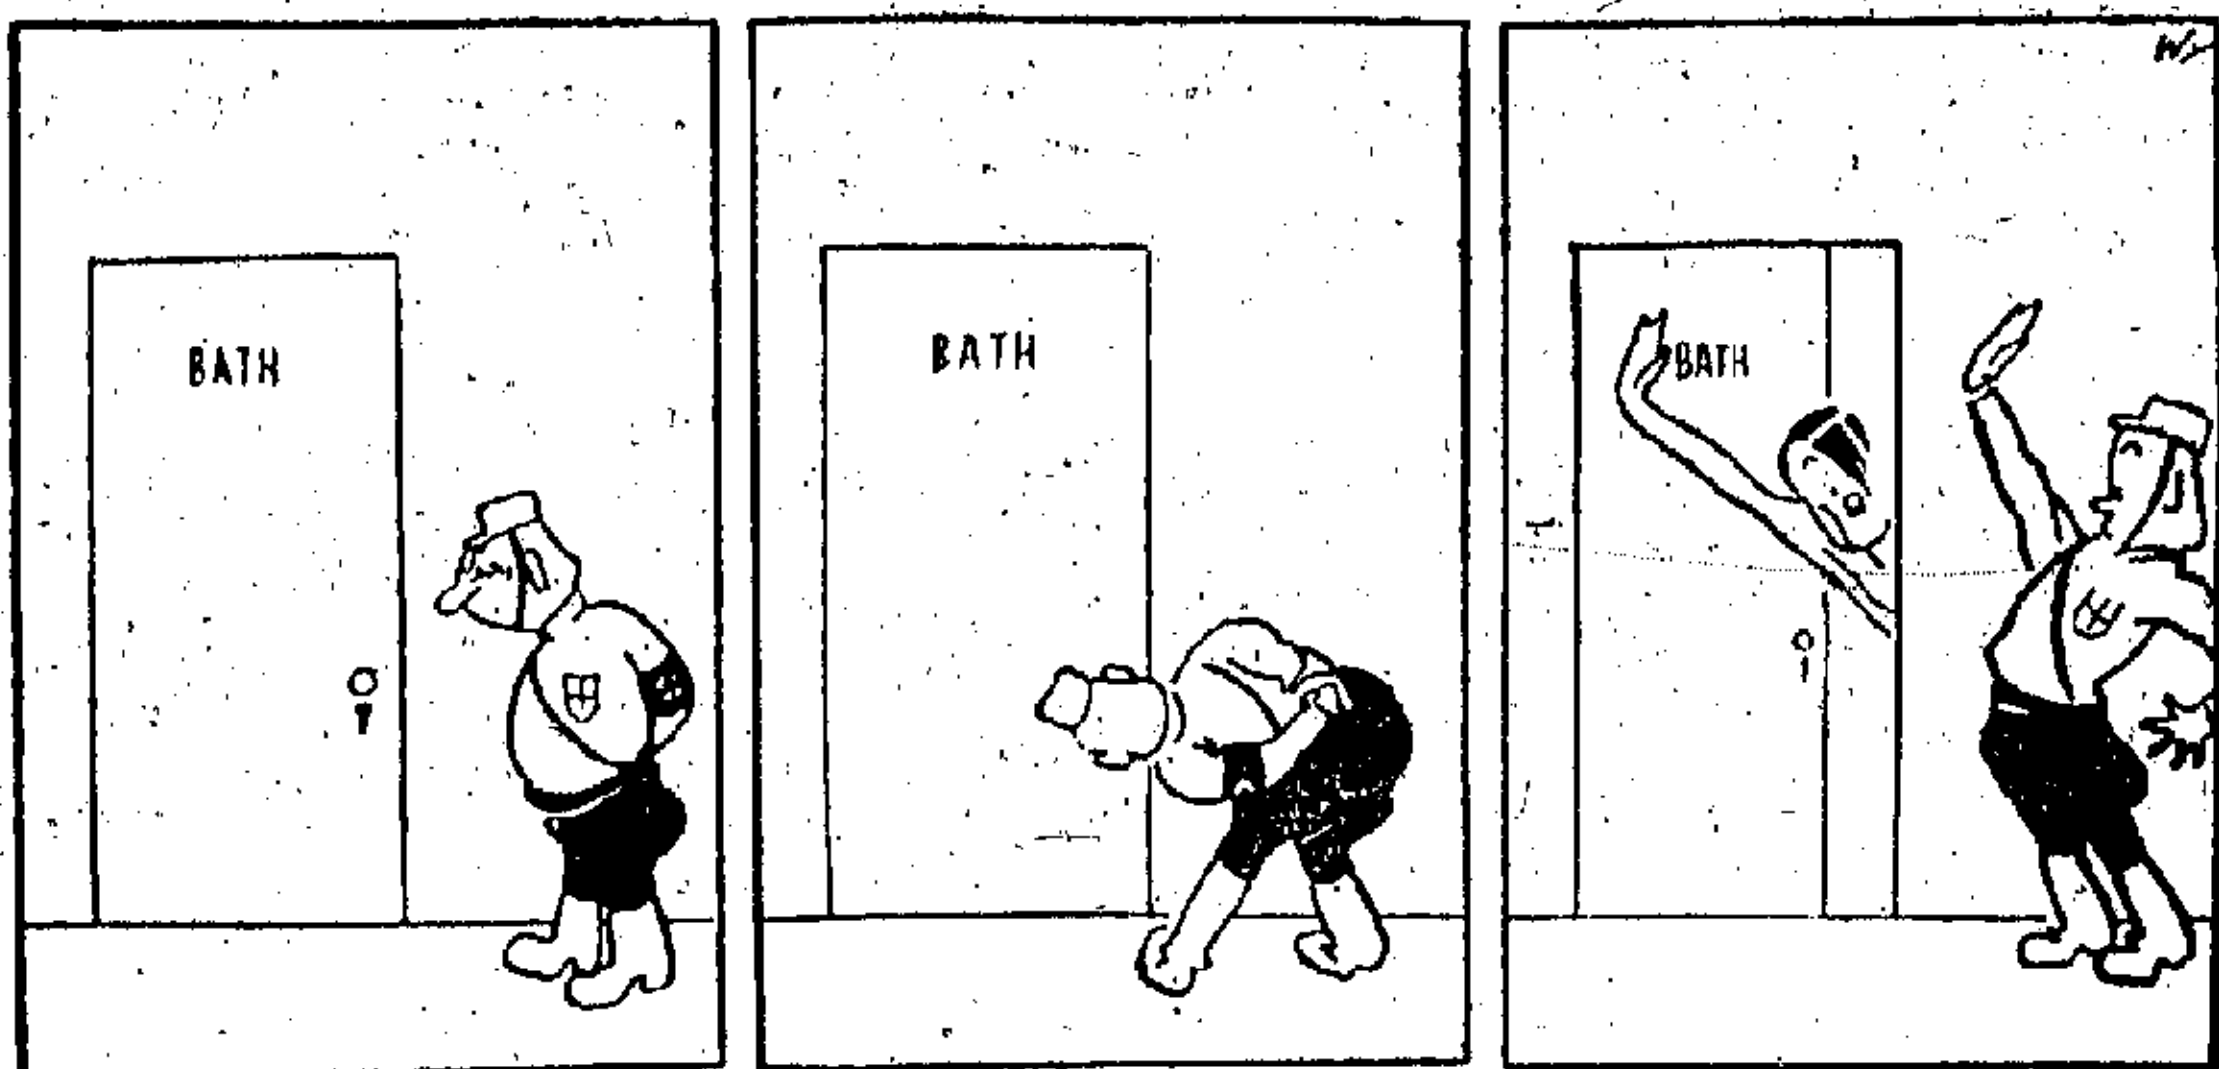

Yield: 1 small loaf.

Almond Loaf is of the pound-cake type and keeps exceptionally well. It's a delightful treat for cake or an accompaniment for fruit punch.

GRACIOUS COLONIAL FASHIONS

NOTHING NEW
"What did you say when Jimmy asked for a kiss?"
"Same old thing."
"And what did he do?"
"Same old thing."

LIKE FATHER
A bookkeeper, who was ill, sent his small son to ask a certain doctor to call. A different physician having arrived, the bookkeeper afterwards asked his son to explain.

"Well, you see, dad," he said, "there were a lot of brass plates on the doors, and when I got to the number you gave me I saw 'Consultations, 10 to 11.' The chap next door was offering 'Consultations, 10 to 1' and I knew you'd be the one that gave the best odds."

CAUGHT
Entering a hotel, a traveller ordered a whisky and soda, and was about to drink it when he noticed a painter at work on a ladder. Immediately he went out without touching the drink.

The painter climbed down and lifted the customer's glass.
"Hi," said the barman, "you can't do that. That chap will be back in a minute, I expect."

"Oh, no, he won't," said the painter. "You see, he's president of our local temperance society, and I'm the secretary."

CARELESS
The roof-spottler was excited. "There's a bomb falling," he telephoned down. "It's coming so near I could catch it."

A moment later there was a terrific explosion. His colleague below snapped one word into the telephone: "Butter-fingers!"

CUTTING REPLY
The old lady, buying some seeds, was being rather troublesome to the assistant.
"You're quite sure these seeds will come up very quickly?" she persisted. "I've left it very late, you see, and I want to be certain that they will come up at once."

"Madam," was the assistant's reply, "plant those seeds, and then jump out of the way if you value your safety."

ONE ON GOERING
Goering wanted more night bombers very urgently. So he went along to a factory.

"I want a dozen of your planes," he ordered. "They must be ready three nights from now."

"Impossible," exclaimed the works manager.
"I command!" roared Goering. "The crews will be here at the time stated."

The time came, and so did the crews. German efficiency had triumphed: there were the planes. Without loss of time they set out for their target, England.

Over London the leading pilot and out dropped three of the factory's night shift.

INDEPENDENT
A dog seized a piece of meat while his owner was visiting the butcher.

"Is that your dog?" asked the butcher, angrily.
"It was," replied the other. "But he's keeping himself now."

WORLDLY WISE
When the Queen of Sheba came and laid her jewels and fine garments before Solomon, what did he say? asked the teacher.
"How much if you want for the lot?" suggested a boy.

NOT NECESSARY
A woman went to buy a drinking trough for her dog, and the shopkeeper asked her if she would like one that bore the inscription, "For the dog."

"I don't mind at all," she replied. "My husband only drinks beer, and the dog can't read."

SUSPICIOUS
"Henry," said his wife, "who is Mabel?"
"Mabel," replied the husband, "why—er—didn't I tell you? Mabel, my dear, is the—er—the name of a horse I backed yesterday. It won. Here's a fiver for you."

"Henry," his wife greeted him when he returned home that evening. "You know the horse you backed yesterday?"
"Yes."

"Well, it's been ringing up on the phone!"

EQUAL TO IT
It was a beastly day. The recruits were dumb. Private Smith was the dumbest of them all.

The sergeant stood up to him. "What was your job in civil life?" he barked.

"Bank clerk," replied Smith.
"I suppose," sneered the sergeant, trying to be funny, "you counted the desks and washed out the inkwells, and made cups of tea for the manager?"

"No, sir," replied Smith. "We kept an old sergeant for those jobs."

DOUBLY STRANGE
A man walked into a pub and asked for a double whisky in a leather-bound gas. When the drink was handed to him he poured the whisky on the floor, ate all the glass except the bit at the bottom, and walked out of the place.

The barman stared after him in amazement. Then, turning to a customer leaning against the bar, he remarked: "Funny man, that."

"He must be," replied the customer. "He's left the best bit."

CURIOS
A Nazi boss had bought a large country house which a local paper reported cost 60,000 marks. One morning, pinned to its main door, was a card which read: "Where did you get the 60,000 marks?"

Highly indignant, the victim offered a reward of 1,000 marks to anyone unmasking the perpetrator.

Next morning another card was found pinned on the door, with the words: "Where did you get the 61,000 marks?"

HELP!
Three Italian bombers encountered one of our aircraft and were shot down into the sea.

The crews, numbering twelve in all, were picked up by a British battleship and put to bed in the spare top bunks.

Next morning, when the captain inspected them, he found they were bruised black and blue.

"Floy, what's happened to these prisoners?" he inquired.

"Well, sir," explained a sailor, "one of them kept saying 'Spiffire, Spiffire' in his sleep. And every time he said 'Spiffire' the other eleven baled out!"

IN A RUT
The business executive looked blue. He walked around the office with an extremely worried face.

"What's wrong with you?" asked his associate. "Family trouble?"

The executive pined the luxurious room nervously.
"No," he replied. "It isn't that. It's something else—and I just can't explain it."

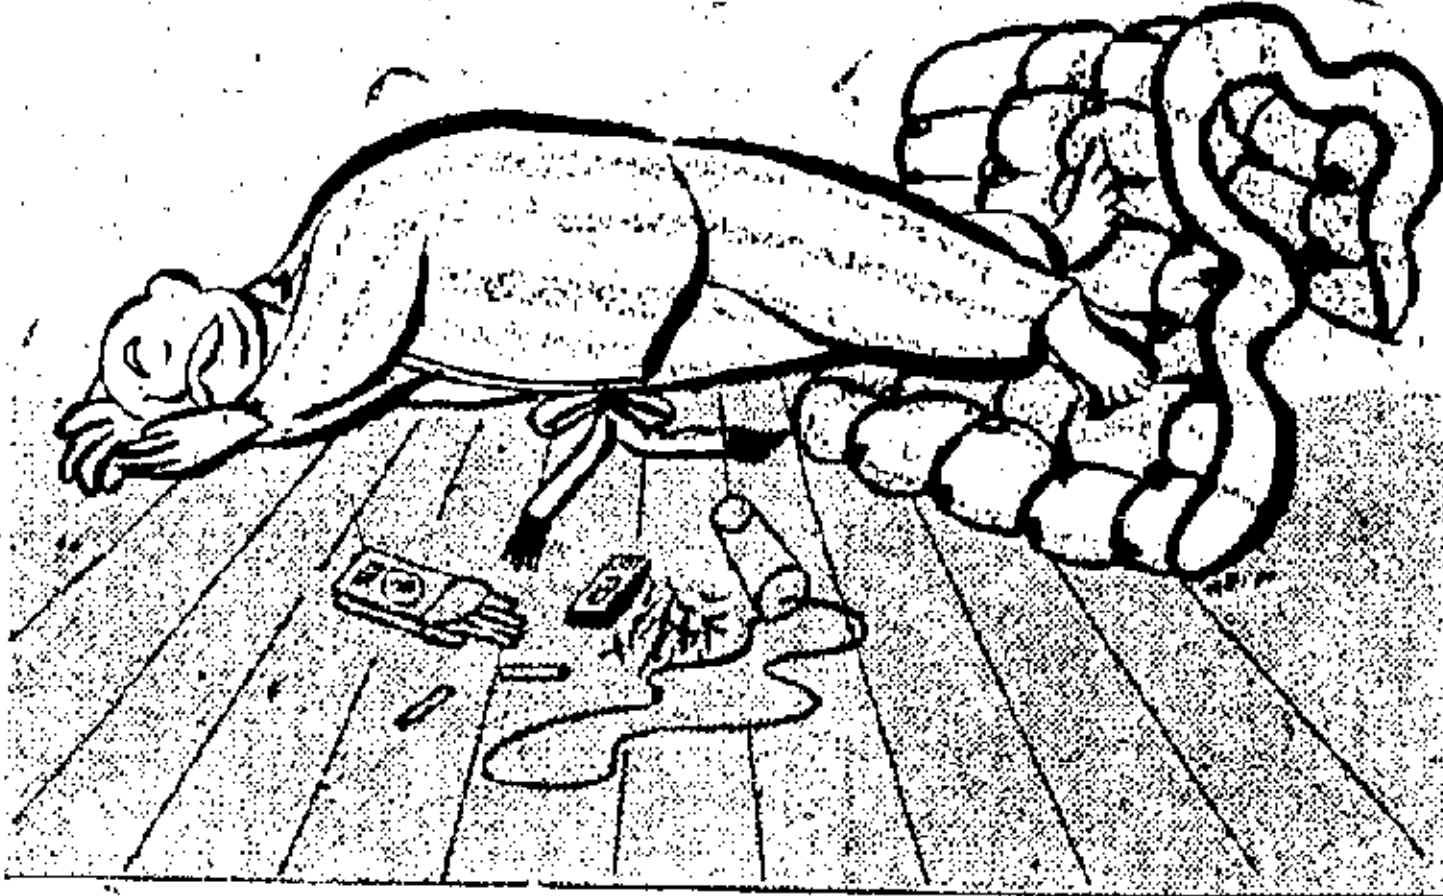

His associate lit a big cigar. "Stop talking nonsense, man," he advised. "Why, you're sitting on top of the world. For the past fifteen years, without fail, you've been drawing a million dollars a year, and—"

"Now you've hit it," interrupted the other. "That's just what's worrying me. A million dollars a year income for the past fifteen years."

He rubbed his weary forehead. "Don't you see how terrible it is?" he went on excitedly. "I'm in a rut!"

But Sorrow Cometh In The Morning

By Gerald Kersh

HANGOVERS are variable.

"They are the nightmares that haunt gaily. They are the skeletons at the banquets. There are the little, bony hands that reach over our shoulders and clasp our wrists. There are the dry voices that whisper: 'Drink and be merry, but to-morrow you will want to die.' They are the voices that drive men to drink. There are men who are never sober, simply because they are afraid of the hangover that must come. . . . men who take care to consume so much alcohol that they will wake up half-drunk, and who breakfast on brandy."

Fear of the hangover is a national problem. There are thinkers who have devoted years of consideration to this fear. Beliefs and superstitions have risen about it. Wise men have thought up remedies. One says: "Take a wedge of butter, and eat it. For some reason, too deep for explanation, sugar is alleged to hasten the process of elimination of alcohol from the bloodstream. Some men swear by this; others say that it is more faith-healing than anything. 'Does not Port contain sugar enough to burst the liver of a goose?' And what is worse than a Port hangover?"

Again, much faith is reposed in the Prairie Oyster, which is nothing more than an egg, raw, with Worcester sauce and other condiments. Hold your nose and swallow it whole. Tremendous stress is laid on the importance of Worcester sauce; but the medical profession insists that the only valuable ingredient of the Prairie Oyster is the egg, the sauces being nothing more than flavouring-matters. A raw egg is quickly absorbed nourishment, and therefore fortifying.

But another iconoclast urges that raw eggs, contrary to popular belief, are no more easy to digest than lightly-boiled ones, and adds: "The efficacy of the Prairie Oyster is imaginary. It only seems to work, because it is unpleasant." There is a man who hunts bars, who eats fish, stew for breakfast after nights in Town. Another insists that nothing can beat a slice of hot buttered toast and three aspirins. "Cachet Faivre!" cry the sophisticated; while from America comes the cult of Alka Seltzer. The man who finds comfort in a combination of face-massage, hot towels, a cup of tea and three fingers of a good strong purgative. A certain salesman breaks his fast with three cups of tea, one cup of coffee, and a bottle of Port, after which he goes about his business, which is drinking bitter. There is a famous club proprietor who drinks a tumblerful of beer, and is then sick. This, he affirms, is "Lovely."

Black coffee, say the doctors, is useless, and have figures to prove it. Informal American opinion, which should be valuable, says: "Do nothing for an hour or two. Let your stomach settle. Then eat." This sounds wise; but is scoffed at by seasoned toppers who cry: "A bar of the dog that bit you." That is to say, a glass of whatever you drank the night before.

If, therefore, you have, in the manner of people in the festive season, gone to bed full of a mixture of punch, sherry, whisky, Burgundy, port, rum, brandy, and Kummel, then? What bit you? What bunch of hairs from what pack of dogs can cure that bite?

A man who ought to know, claims that two bottles of Worthington and a kipper will cure any hangover, and says, in parenthesis: "You needn't eat the kipper."

Hot baths are supposed to be good. So are cold baths. And there is a new thing, also from America, I believe. It consists in a great oxygen-cylinder and an inhaler. The man who recommends it says: "When you wake up, put the inhaler over your face, and turn on the oxygen. You immediately feel as if a gimlet is being driven into your forehead between the eyes. It lasts for five minutes. You feel the gimlet going right through your head. Then it comes out at the back of your head, and you feel marvellous." The idea is, the rapid oxidation of alcohol in the blood-stream.

And he adds: "Everybody ought to have one."

But a medical student, to whom

I spoke of this, said: "If you put a mouse in a tank of oxygen, it dances on its hind legs and falls down dead. Mark my words, there's nothing to beat a shandy made of mild ale and ginger beer, with a dash of rum in it, and six hard-boiled eggs. But mind you chew the eggs."

So it may be said that the problem remains unsolved. The hangover remains, in all its varieties.

There is the Delayed Action Hangover. Sufferers from this rise at six in the morning, feeling excessively cheerful. They sing, they laugh. They look at themselves in their mirrors, and think: How well I look. They are full of optimism. They expand their chests, and sniff the air. Then, without warning, they feel that they have been struck over the head with a rolled-up blanket dipped in hot treacle. An invisible hand reaches up and seizes their vital parts in a clammy grip. An invisible foot presses into their stomachs. Lead pours into their feet. Something expands inside their heads, and pushes their eyes out. Their cheeks seem to sag like the jaws of bloodhounds. Their blood runs lumpy. Their livers drop, with a soggy thud, into their pelvises. They have pains in the neck. Their temples ache. They have fits. They throw. Then they look at themselves again in the glass, and cry: "Who is this filthy stranger with the puffy face staring me out of countenance?" But their voice will not come. And, throwing up a hand to ward off the apparition, they find that they have knocked a bottle of eau-de-Cologne off the dressing-table, which is ten feet away.

There is also an Oral Hangover, which confines itself to the mouth. The sufferer with the Oral Hangover has all the other symptoms; but more mildly. His mouth is the thing he wants to get rid of. But nothing can be done. Mouthwashes are ineffectual. His tongue seems to be covered with a strip of very old plush taken from the seat of a fourpenny row in a fleapit cinema in Rotherhithe. His throat feels like the inside of a very old lorry-driver's glove. Each time he swallows, he feels as if he were being choked by a strip of his neighbour. The place where the nose joins the back of the mouth is dried up. He remembers the ballistics advertisements, and feels that he could cut his breath off in long, fuzzy strips and make himself a winter overcoat out of them. And when he lights a cigarette, he tastes nothing but burning oil.

Furthermore, there is the Jitters. Fat men seem to be most vulnerable to the jitters. They awake with all the symptoms of the first two hangovers. Then, leaping out of bed to drink water, they find that they have leapt over the chair into the fireplace. They pick themselves up, trembling, and, meaning to adjust their pyjama-cord, punch themselves in the ear. They hold a glass under the tap. It won't fill. What won't it fill? Oh, God. What has happened? Why won't the glass fill? Because they are holding the glass over the tap; and in any case the glass is upside down, and the tap not turned on. A lorry passes in the street outside. They hear it. The glass falls. They snatch it. They snatch a cigarette, and poke it into their left eye. Light a match, and puff. Then they find that they have set their hair alight. Put their heads under the cold tap. Sit down. Put the cigarette back in their mouths, and puff furiously for five minutes, only to find that the cigarette is not lit. Then their stomachs climb up, like spiders, and rub, purring, against the roofs of their mouths; and they lie down and hope for death.

Why define further? It is painful stuff.

There are many hangovers, all with similar symptoms. The methylated spirit drinker, on awakening, drinks water to satisfy a fearful thirst, and then is drunk again. That happens also, with the Irish poteen. Red Lizzie attacks the head, which seems, on the morning after, to be about to burst and wreck the prison. The Ashantees discovered a new drink, which was simply made by adding an ounce of yeast and a handful of calcium carbide to a petrol-drum of dirty water, and sealing for a day or two. It induced a hangover which made even cannibals weep. And as for the pious Greek and Eastern European wines, well, thank God for England, where there is no Masikhia, and little Tokay. Tokay makes the world come to an end. Sit down. Put the cigarette back in their mouths, and puff furiously for five minutes, only to find that the cigarette is not lit. Then their stomachs climb up, like spiders, and rub, purring, against the roofs of their mouths; and they lie down and hope for death.

Why define further? It is painful stuff.

HIGHLY-STRUNG SENSITIVE CHILDREN

have a better chance in life

But there are dangers that have to be watched during childhood

RIGHT from birth on, you can see whether a child is the highly-strung, sensitive type or not. He seems to live more intensely. Everything makes a far deeper impression on him. As he grows up he learns more easily, is quicker in his reactions and makes headway much faster than other children.

But though these qualities give him a better chance in life, they bring with them dangers that have to be watched. Parents need far greater insight in handling such children. Many highly-strung, sensitive children have grown up to be utter failures—weak, nervous, oversensitive—because their parents did not fully understand certain health warnings during childhood.

These health warnings may start at any age. The child goes off his food, is finicky at meals; he gets pale, puffy under the eyes; you find he tires easily, becomes listless; he sleeps restlessly. All these are serious signs that something is wrong.

It usually means that the child is using up his nervous energy more quickly than he's replacing it. And it is at night, during sleep, that these stores of nervous energy should be replaced. If they are not replaced, the nervous strain on the child gets worse and worse. He's suffering from Night Starvation.

At the first sign of any one of these symptoms, start your child on Horlicks, a cupful regularly every night. Horlicks strengthens his nerves and builds his appetite by guarding him against Night Starvation. Soon you'll find he'll eat well and look strong and healthy. He'll grow up to make the fullest use of his special gifts and capabilities without the terrible handicap of nervous exhaustion that sometimes accompanies them.

Give your child Horlicks tonight. Horlicks is obtainable at all good stores.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By Ely Culbertson

IT goes without saying that I like to present good hands in this column, but sometimes a hand can be a little too good—to be true. Experts who are undoubtedly clever in the play of the cards are not supermen, and certain plays, nonchalantly described [after the fact] as brilliant, may be very beautiful, but I question whether any one would think of the play unless he were forewarned that he was expected to do something sensational.

West, dealer. Neither side vulnerable. NORTH S-3 D-5 H-K Q 8 C-K J 10 7 6 2 C-Q 9

WEST EAST S-A 6 S-K 10 9 7 5 2 D-A 3 D-4 2 H-A 4 3 H-5 4 2 C-K 10 8 5 3 2 C-4 3 S-Q J 4 S-Q J 4 5 D-8 8 4 C-A J 6

The bidding recommended by the English committee is: West North East South 1 club 1 diamond 1 spade 2 no-trump Pass 3 no-trump Pass Pass

The committee admitted that this would be rather forceful bidding on the parts of North-South, but it is not so far out of line that we should have any difficulty in accepting it. In par contests such as this, the opening lead, as much as the final contract, is directed by the committee, and in this case West is told to lead the ace and six of spades. [From that point on all players are on their own.] East wins the second spade trick and, seeing little to be gained by a shift to his partner's club suit, continues with a third round of spades, hoping eventually to get on lead with the diamond queen in order to run the established spades. It is at this point that West is called upon to make a stupendous play. He must throw away the diamond ace! Notice this huge monkey wrench that this throws into the enemy's machinery. Now declarer cannot run the diamond suit without giving East the lead, nor can he make nine tricks without establishing diamonds. It is, as I have said, a truly beautiful defensive play—if any one makes it! It must be observed that if West fails to discard his diamond ace (even as you or I declarer has an easy guess for his contract. On winning with the spade queen he leads a diamond toward dummy, and he will have to be very obtuse to play the wrong card. All he need do is think of our original club bid to realize that we are marked with the spade and diamond aces, hence his one thought being to keep East off lead; if we duck, he goes right up with the diamond king and continues with the jack. Now, when we are forced to take our ace, there is no play we can make that will obtain a trick and declarer actually makes his contract with an over-trick.

I have intimated that for West to discard his diamond ace is virtually "double dummy," but I think I had better backwater a little. Actually, if West is smart enough to think about such a play, he becomes a winter overcoat out of the way." It will. Thus I cannot seriously say that the recommended play is absurd or out of the question; I am merely skeptical of the exact sequence of events [the bidding, opening lead, the spade continuation by East] that make this the vital play, and equally skeptical that any flesh-and-bones player would rise to the occasion.

WHAT people thought people said, and what really was said, has been the root of many a good and bad joke. "Send reinforcements, we are going to advance," is translated into: "Send three-and-fourpence, we are going to a dance." And so on.

There is an old, old story about a little girl and her dog, Paddy. She was most abominably devoted to this dog. Thoughts of it occupied all her conscious moments. In due course, being old enough to attend a day-school, she accordingly left home at about eight-forty-five, and returned at four.

One afternoon, in her absence, her dog was run over. I forget into how many pieces the unhappy animal was divided; but one thing is certain—it was suddenly and swiftly killed. The house trembled. Who would dare to tell the little girl?

The task fell on the old nurse. When the little girl returned, the poor woman, with a face like a tragic mask, said:—

"Darling, I have something to tell you."

"Something horrible?"

"Yes."

"Paddy's dead?"

"Oh, is he?"

"Yes, he was run over."

"Oh, is he ready?"

"The nurse was overjoyed, yet dumfounded. The little girl had her tea. Then she said:—

"Nanny."

"Where's Paddy?"

"But I told you. He's dead, dear."

At this, the child let loose a wail which shook the room, and caused passers-by to stop and shudder.

"But darling, I told you before."

And the little girl replied:—

"I thought you said Daddy!"

"HI, NELLIE!"

Lightly or wrongly, we always derive what is known as the "heartbreak" column in the women's magazines. You remember

What secrets the agony editors cannot tell. And thinking of it, we become a little uneasy.

Were we the victims of whom Miss X, the Waitress, and Miss Y, the Barnmaid, wrote? Women write such frightful things. There is hardly a column without its letter saying: "He has hardly spoken to me. He only comes into our restaurant for coffee. But I know he loves me, and I am madly in love with him. Shall I give up my other 'boy friend'? Do help me, I do not know what to do."

Oh, the unsuspecting males that walk the streets, quite unaware of the sticky bombardment of oozing honeycombs of feminine adoration! What is it that women see in us? God knows. He once looked into my eyes and called me Little Snowdew. Shall I have my husband and three daughters?

But the dozen of the Advisory Ladies is, of course Dorothy Dix, whose columns are syndicated in, we believe, a million newspapers or is it two million? She is an amiable old lady. She looks just as you would expect an Agony Editor to look. Her name is Elizabeth Meriwether Gilmer (but that is between you and us). Don't breathe a word to a soul. She lives in New Orleans, and receives more letters than rain can count.

You can see, quite easily, which mail-box contains Dorothy Dix's mail; it throbs.

Omitting the pathos, here are some extracts from letters received by her:—

My husband keeps telling me to go to hell. Have I a legal right to take the children?

I am fifty-five years old in love with a woman who already has a husband. Please suggest quickest and most humane way of getting rid of same.

I have been a decent girl, so far as I remember.

He had been a perfect gentleman toward me, which I did not expect from a married man.

You say... the domestic woman who keeps a clean house is the salt of the earth... but did you ever hear of salt attracting the sugar daddies?

And this one, which is something of a peach:—

Oscar Wilde's remark: "Only a man with a heart of stone could keep from laughing at the death of Little Nell?" Well, it is like that.

The things women write about! The subject in which the lady who edits the page must be versed! She must know everything—all the seven deadly sins, and their antidotes, and their combinations; all the virtues; all the degrees of a hundred religions; geography, the genealogies of a million families, personal hygiene, the art of fascination, the technique of married love, the intricacies of divorce, the problems of jealousy, the seven arts, the subtleties of arbitration—in a word, everything!

What secrets the agony editors cannot tell. And thinking of it, we become a little uneasy.

"Yes," said Mr. Potter, simply, "try well then," said Satan, and paused. "Then he said, impulsively, 'Look here, I am a gentleman. Give me one minute of your time, and it's a deal. You settle your debts, and—'

"What, not even a minute? You're a hard man, Mr. Potter. 'I always was, and proud of it,' said Potter.

"Hm," said Satan. "Well, what do you propose?"

"Well, look here," said Potter, "I have a plan to hide his terrible emotion. 'I'll sell you one second; one second only.' 'For a million?' 'And a half.' 'Now come.' 'One and a half million or nothing,' said Potter.

"Very good," said the Devil, with a sigh. "It's a deal. Put the money in your pocket." Potter examined it carefully. It was real; new notes of a thousand

"How do you know?" asked the stockbroker.

"The visitor clutched his hand with fingers as hot as fire, and went on, 'I know everything. I am Satan.' 'The Adversary!'

"Bib, I came to help. I am the friend of such as you. I know that you need five hundred thousand pounds. Otherwise—"

"All I need is 'time,' said Mr. Potter.

"You will go to prison for fourteen years," said the Devil, "if you cannot raise half a million by mid-day to-morrow. You cannot raise fifty thousand. You are lost. You have embezzled the savings of a thousand people. They will show you no mercy. You are bankrupt. You have been lost for two years, now. You simply persuaded yourself that a miracle might happen to save you at the last moment. You are fortunate."

"Yes, I come to offer you employment. Half a million in cash for five years of your life."

Mr. Potter gaped. But he was famous throughout the City as a skilled bargainer, and so, concealing his emotion, he said:—

"Ridiculous. Five years? Come, my dear sir, you can't buy my soul for a trivial sum like that! I'm a business man! Why, I know everything about business. I can wrangle out where no other man could. I can juggle with paper. I could make five times that much money in a single year, given opportunity."

"Very well, then. One year," said Satan.

"No. Not a chance. In one year, anything might happen. Besides, it's playing with fire. No."

"Cash," said Satan, taking out a great white bundle of money.

"One million!" The Devil drew from his coat pocket after packet of banknotes. "For one little year!"

"Not even for one month."

"Now—come," said Satan, drawing closer, "be reasonable. I am a generous master. I always release my servants before the specified time. One month! One million! In cash! Why, many people—"

"I'm not like other people, Mr. Satan. I am a man of commerce, a financial wizard. Confound it, one may make a million in a second! You don't understand big business. No, sir. What you offer is too small."

"A big shot, eh?" said Satan.

"I hope to go far."

"Look at that street, look at those houses, and those great buildings! I could help you to have all that. But you are clever enough to be master of the world." He stood at the window, looking out. Potter stood by him. "And do you know what? I once offered a man the whole earth."

"What for?"

"His soul."

"Hm," said Potter, and looked sideways at the Devil, who proceeded:—

"For he refused."

"Really?"

"Absolutely."

"So what happened then?"

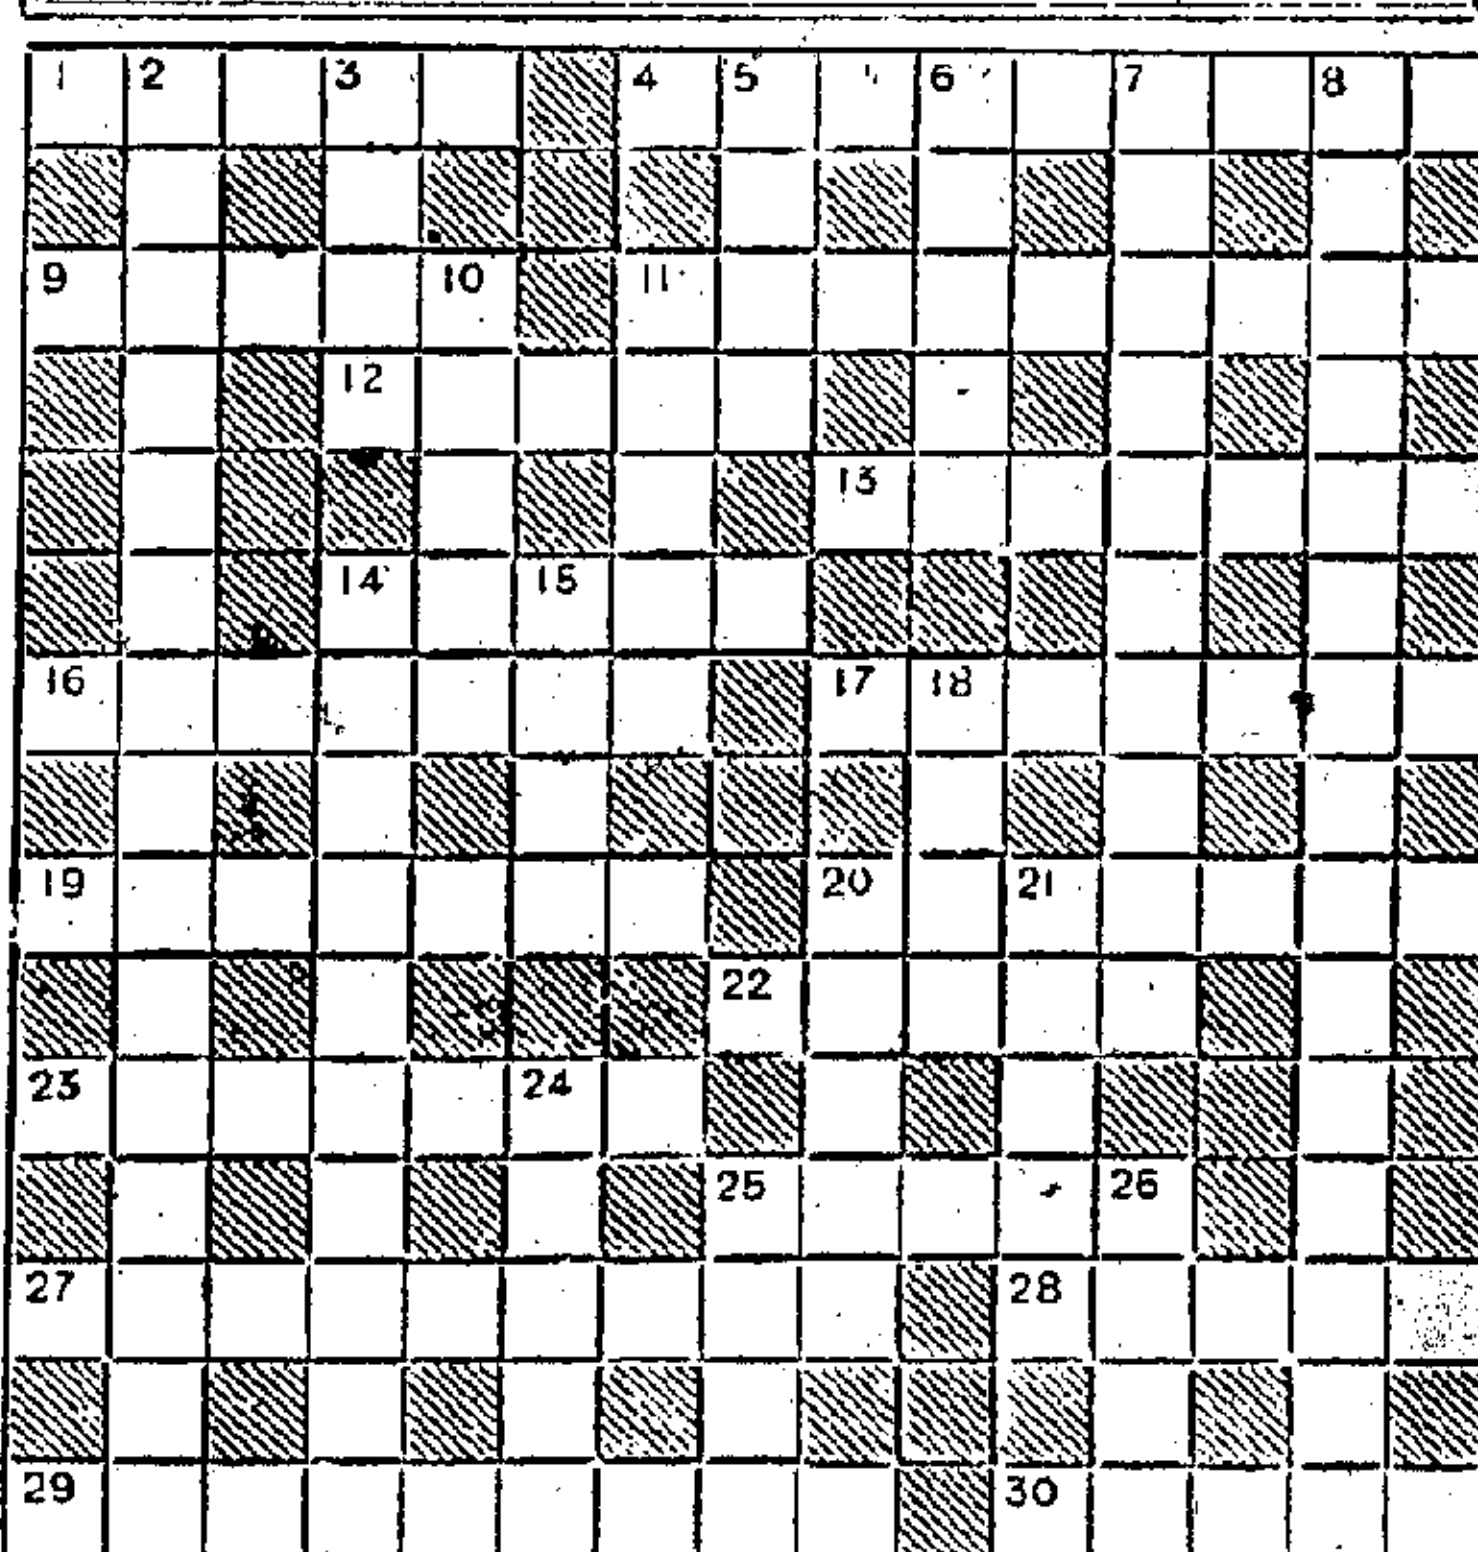

"Well, I turned to him, and I said to him just what I'm going to say to you. But he refused that, too."

"What did you say?" asked Potter.

"Cast thyself down!" said Satan. Potter's body fell eighty feet on to some railings, and folded there like a wet handkerchief.

"One second," said Satan, putting away his watch; and disappeared like smoke in a wind.
